Adobe has teamed up with DXO Technology to make a new benchmark for still cameras and it's called Adobe RGB (SW) (REDCODE RAW). Adobe recommends using its Color Management System along with proper Photoshop color management for professional workflow. Comparison of Adobe and DxO RAW, SW Bokeh Bokeh, also known as out of focus blur, is the appearance of a out of focus blur in a photograph. It can be either natural or artifical and can also be in focus or even overexposed. It is a very dynamic scene in photography. Bokeh or out of focus blur is formed by light entering the aperture of the camera lens and reaching the sensor. It is commonly formed by light coming from the front of the lens that is reflected by elements inside the lens, such as a hood or a lens filter or by light from the top or bottom of the lens, such as a parabolic reflector. One type of bokeh refers to the smooth or slightly out of focus blur that is achieved by light passing through a large aperture. This kind of bokeh can be used to imply a very shallow depth of field. A bokeh in the middle of the picture, it is blurred but not underexposed, forms the impression of a toy. A small bokeh, it is blurry and blurred. It has an ethereal feeling that makes the eye want to move to it. A huge bokeh, it is blurred and blurred. It makes the picture appear dreamy and unbelievable. Bokeh can be used to create an incredible effect and can make a photograph unique. Bokeh is covered extensively on this course and a sample image is at the end of the article. Comparison of DxO RAW, SW: Color Accuracy A great photographic picture will be able to match the colors of the real world. This means that the colors should look true to life. Adobe and DxO RAW, SW both have very similar color profiles. The algorithms used to generate the profiles match each other well. There are situations where Adobe and DxO RAW, SW are not perfectly aligned. However, the algorithms used in each program are fairly different so some of the situations in which there is color misalignment will be unavoidable. Kathleen Wynne is expected to announce a massive expansion of Ontario's post-secondary system as she lays out a new agenda for the province in her keynote speech to the Liberal Party convention on Monday. Ms. Wynne is said to be prepared to announce the biggest expansion of Ontario's colleges and universities in two decades and increase the number of university and college spaces by up to 30 per cent, to as many as 100,000. Story continues below advertisement Education Minister Laurel Broten and colleges-college presidents have been working on the announcement, set to be unveiled at the party's convention on Monday, as part of a major review of the province's post-secondary system. Premier Kathleen Wynne will deliver the keynote address to the Liberal Party convention at the Metro Toronto Convention Centre Monday. The Liberals will choose a new leader and elect new members for the next provincial election in 2018. Ontario Provincial Archives The announcement on Tuesday of the new spots at universities and colleges is expected to set the stage for a Liberal spending spree that will be put forward in the next budget. If the province makes good on its commitment to boost spending on colleges and universities by $1-billion in the next budget, it will pump an additional $7-billion into post-secondary spending, not including the addition of new spaces at universities and colleges. The increased spending could include $9-billion for new funding for universities and colleges over the next three years, the party's platform document says. Spending on colleges and universities is slated to rise by $1.4-billion annually over three years, beginning in 2018-19, up from $1.1-billion a year. In the document, the Liberals are pledging "to support university and college students by committing to a $9-billion investment in post-secondary over the next three years." Story continues below advertisement Ms. Wynne is promising to boost spending on universities and colleges in the next three years, increasing the money being put into a university or college from $60,500 to $80,000 per student over three years. University spending would increase from $64-billion in 2019-20 to $70-billion in 2022-23. Expanded funding will cover development of new buildings, facilities, equipment and services for students. Each university is also set to be allocated an additional $2-billion over three years for research, to build on existing research, funding for new

Changes in net metabolism during development of obesity and insulin resistance in rats. The objective was to assess the changes in resting metabolic rate (RMR) and respiratory quotient (RQ) and their alterations in relation to changes in body weight (BW), body fat (BF), and circulating insulin (Ins) during development of obesity and insulin resistance in rats. Wistar rats received an atherogenic diet during 8 to 13 weeks of life. At the end of the diet, BW, BF, and fasting blood glucose increased in all animals compared to control group (C), which was trained on a standard diet. Rats of the experimental groups (E1, E2, E3) were treated with a hypercholesterolemic diet and grew as obese as animals of the C group. Insulin treatment was performed in order to reduce the insulin resistance in the groups E2 and E3, during 6 to 10 days. At the end of the experiment, the animals were killed and the following parameters were measured: BW, BF, serum triglycerides (TG), Ins, and glucose. The data showed that insulin treatment is associated to a significant decrease in the BW in both treated groups, without changes in BF. RMR was increased in obese animals, and RQ was decreased in comparison to the C group. The RMR and RQ values were higher in obese rats (E1, E2, E3) than in C animals. Ins treatment significantly reduced the RMR in both groups E2 and E3, but its effects were only noticeable in E3. The correlation between RMR and Ins was positive and significant ($r = 0.69$, P Q: Using getDay() function with Kendo UI date picker I'm using kendo ui grid with a datepicker.
