Prompt feedback to reduce postoperative pain and analgesic consumption after laparoscopic surgery. Postoperative pain and analgesic consumption are often difficult to manage. A multimodal, multidisciplinary intervention has been developed by the investigators. This study aims to assess the effectiveness of this intervention. This was a non-randomized, cluster-controlled trial. The intervention consisted of telephonic patients' follow-up by a trained anaesthetist within the first 24 h after surgery. Telephonic follow-up was compared with patients with standard care with regard to pain intensity, use of pain medication and analgesic consumption. Medical records were assessed and the potential risk of bias assessed. Sixteen clusters per group (32 clusters in total) participated in the trial. A total of 561 patients were evaluated. Compared with standard care, the intervention group had significantly less opioid use during the first 24 h ($P = 0.005$). Compared with standard care, the intervention group also had a lower pain score in the recovery unit ($P = 0.001$) and less need for rescue medication during the recovery unit ($P = 0.002$). However, there was no

Oct 11, 2020 A·Q: Bulk insert in SQL Server With SQL Server I do have a table which has no primary key. I want to bulk insert into the table. But what's the best way to do this? Will I need to choose an ID to identify the rows? Thanks for your reply. Amit A: use a parameterized INSERT. This is the easiest and safest. In your stored procedure, change the INSERT statement to this: declare @ID int set @ID= (SELECT ID FROM YourTable WHERE something = 1) Insert into YourTable (...) values (@ID) A: Use the SQL Server Import and Export wizard, and import data via File->Import and Export...
