Repeated infusions of interleukin-2 in patients with metastatic malignant melanoma. The effects of repeated infusions of interleukin-2 (IL-2) on malignant melanoma were investigated in 35 evaluable patients, 18 of whom were given IL-2 alone; 10 were given IL-2 in combination with lymphokine-activated killer (LAK) cells; and seven received LAK cells alone. Twenty-six of these patients had melanoma with cutaneous lymph node (nodal) metastases (stage M1), and the rest (stage M0) had distant metastases. There was no evidence that IL-2 administration stimulated host-reactive cells in vitro. Patients were given IL-2 administered by bolus injection six times a day for 4 consecutive days followed by a 2-week rest period. Responses were measured clinically by radiologic and by biologic (IL-2 assay) response criteria. Correlative studies by microcytotoxicity assay and fluorescent-activated cell sorter analysis showed that the tumor burden in nodal and subcutaneous lesions was decreased in 13 of 14 patients who had both a biochemical and a radiologic response. Responses correlated with the concentration of IL-2 in biologic assays performed on circulating lymphocytes. Adverse effects included the characteristic flu-like symptoms of fever, chills, and myalgia/arthralgia; marked transient capillary leakage (serum protein and creatine phosphokinase elevations greater than 10 times normal); an intense pleuritic chest pain, resulting in chest tube drainage; and, in 3 patients, pulmonary embolus and pulmonary hypertension, manifested clinically by dyspnea and dramatic increase in pulmonary vascular resistance. The overall response rate was 45% (4 of 9). Of the 18 patients who received IL-2 alone, 2 of 10 and 8 of 8 had a positive biochemical and radiologic response, respectively. Of the 7 patients given IL-2 and LAK cells, all had a positive biochemical response ($p = 0.0007$), and 6 of 7 had a positive radiological response, though with less frequency than for IL-2 alone ($p = 0.13$). Thus IL-2 is active against metastatic melanoma. Toxicities noted with greater frequency than in the IL-2 monotherapy arm were inflammatory responses. Prospective randomized studies are needed to determine the effect of this regimen on patient survival.Q: How can I speed up

TORONTO -- The Cubs announced Wednesday they have sold 3,272,561 tickets since opening night, surpassing last year's total. The announced sellout for the Cubs' 100th anniversary season was 29,227, which came Sunday in the third game. "What we do in the baseball business is business," Cubs president of baseball operations Theo Epstein said. "We're not doing it for any reason other than to build a brand, to build a ticket base, to develop our marketplace. And I think most people in the business would say that we've done a pretty good job in that respect." The Cubs were fined $5 million on Monday for failing to put a sellout in place for Opening Day. "I think I've heard [the fine] mentioned," Epstein said. "I heard [the fine] mentioned on the radio. I haven't heard what $5 million would look like. So that's probably why I haven't heard about it. [Monday] was a busy news day. "We're focused on the season. We've got to make sure we're in position to win games, and make sure we're operating our business in a way that enhances our ability to win games." The Cubs are the first team to reach 100,000 in season tickets since the 2008 Yankees had sold 3,585,046, according to a USA Today report at the time. The Cubs announced last month that they will be implementing a new ticket program as the team tries to keep baseball's largest season ticket waiting list in check. • News from MLB.com beat reporter Patrick Mooney Cubs fan David Lozano, who has been waiting two years to obtain a 2020 season ticket, on Thursday told WGN that he was "thrilled" the team announced a sellout. "I've been waiting for this since I was a kid," Lozano told WGN in Chicago. "It's a dream come true, man." The Cubs said they are also adding 5,000 standing room only tickets per game to their season ticket packages in order to try to contain the waiting list.Sweet Springs, Texas Sweet Springs is a census-designated place (CDP) in Bexar County, Texas, United States.
