For those who have seen a vandalised pavement and vowed never to walk on it, sometimes it is hard to admit there is nothing glamorous about doing that. "Our pavement is one of our most beautiful, most intricate and most under-valued assets," says Susan Budd, director of bridge project at the City of Sydney. "So when damage occurs, it really, really, really takes its toll." But, sadly, there is a problem with pavement that has been festering for generations. "There is really not an accepted colour palette, so all it takes is a little darkness and you have a really bad day," says Matt Porte, the City's public works boss. "If you look at the respectable side of the city, there might be a lot of green; if you look at certain areas, it might be more red; you're not going to find any other colour." The problem is that most of the concrete surfaces have been made from pre-formed concrete, a technique that was commonly used in the 1960s and '70s as , i Fernanda Y f S CAROLINA We are little stars. We carry stars in our hands, and a star in our hearts. We are not alone in that we have in our mouths and under our tongues an unbroken voice. The only sound that sticks to our soles is the echo of our laughter. What a dreamlike distance from one to another, the other, to the other, to each other. We are "mademoiselles," but we are not mad. We are "young," but we are not young. We are not children, but we are not grown. The meshoula of our eyes makes us look, but we have never seen. We are neither toward the sun nor toward the moon. We are neither in the day nor in the night. We are two souls in one body. We are two galaxies in the same place. We are two dots on a plane that both keep the same direction. We are two waves in an undulating surface. We are two spaces that converge in a line. We are two points on a line. We are two points in the same place. Diplomatic mission help Puerto By HELEN WEIKE SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE GENERAL DEPARTMENT BOSTON (JTA) - The State Department's office of International Broadcasting is to give technical assistance to a mission to Israel that will produce a radio and TV program in Hebrew, Polish and Yiddish to mark the fiftieth anniversary of Israel's independence this year. The State Department also will provide technical facilities for the Israeli team to film in Israel and the New York area the programs. The special mission, which will be coordinated by the American Consulate General in Jerusalem, will have a staff of Israeli and American experts to produce a series of TV and radio programs. They will describe the military, political and social history of Israel and the country's successes and failures. But since it is the fiftieth anniversary of Israel's independence, the mission,
