Immersive Information for CEOs Performing Information Management. Share This Page The name stands for a small slice of who you are and what you do. We are asking our partners to focus their efforts on the most important marketing and creative activities. So, what are the key marketing themes for 2014? Here are some of them. Branding - This is not a new concept. Most will recall the Distinguish brand campaign launched in the early days of the Great Recession. Unfortunately, the resonance has faded, and we need a reboot. Competitiveness - This is not a new concept. With the world becoming a small (if not yet) global village, today everyone is a competitor for your customers. While many assume they have little to gain, or a negative view of the offline world, we believe most will try to leverage their presence to gain more business and create more value. The value-generating "product" is the connection between the customer and the brand. The difference today is that anyone, even in remote places, has a digital presence, either in an online world or through mobile technology. This reality means that the offline world, even if it took a back seat for a while, is back.

People, ideas, and technologies that fail will survive, but those that innovate will thrive. I believe this needs to be driven in your culture. Continuous improvement – This is not a new concept. However, “normal” was not good enough in 2011, and we believe this will be a hallmark of 2014. The world is changing and even if your brand or brand position is not driving this, it will be the competition. Your brand must be able to adapt to change, and that requires continuous improvement. With that in mind, are you ready to reposition your brand to include a new value proposition? I still believe that in 2014, we will see manufacturers with global footprints and brands with US and international footprints (even as smaller brands). Here’s how the strategy looks.1. 2.3. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 648931e174
