Vietnam veterans raise awareness for PTSD on Veterans Day The Facebook page for Ryan Hall has drawn tens of thousands of fans, and young athletes across the world have seen Hall raise millions for PTSD (post-traumatic stress disorder) awareness. Hall, an 800m runner who placed 10th in the 2012 U.S. Olympic Trials, has chronicled his post-Olympic race down-to-earthly experiences and the mental health concerns that bring him to tears. He will run in the 5,000-meter race at the U.S.A. Track & Field Nationals, an event that will pit him against the world's elite U.S. All Star Running Team. Hall has chronicled his journey on the page, which is intended to raise awareness of post-traumatic stress disorder and one of its most common symptoms, nightmares. The post-race nightmare stems from Hall's time in combat, where he saw enough carnage that he was driven to file a lawsuit against the U.S. Army to determine whether his family was eligible for damages. Hall's track career will continue, but he has opened himself up to the rest of the world. On his Facebook page, a link to PTSD appears in one of the three columns along with the statement, "Been dealing with the issue for a 648931e174

Serbian President Aleksandar Vucic on Friday imposed a one-month state of emergency in Serbia and ordered the military to combat illegal immigrants and leftist radicals. Vucic gave the emergency decree, which comes into force on Saturday, after radical groups, including nationalist youths, attacked migrants. "I am imposing a state of emergency for the entire time the UN is holding the refugee summit in Serbia, which starts on Monday," Vucic told a news conference. "The riots in the northern Serbian city of Vlasic will be used as an excuse to impose the state of emergency, but this is not the only reason," Vucic said. Vucic said that the decision to impose the state of emergency was taken after the president's office received information about ethnic cleansing and illegal migration in the north of the country, and about "jungle" camps in the south. "While 15 years after the fall of communism, and 14 years after I joined the EU, there is illegal migration and a small number of Serb migrants are in a hostile environment and being treated as a foreign population," Vucic said. He said that Serb soldiers in the northwest of the country, where the violence had taken place, were threatened by members of radical leftist groups. "Serbian soldiers have been attacked by leftist radicals and members of the secret service," Vucic said. He added that the government was keeping in touch with the EU and the International Organization for Migration over the refugee summit in the northern city of Roskovic. Vucic said he hoped that the state of emergency would be over by Saturday. According to the Serbian authorities,
