The role of statins in atrial fibrillation patients undergoing cardiac surgery. Atrial fibrillation is the most common sustained arrhythmia after cardiac surgery, and is associated with adverse postoperative outcomes. Statins have pleiotropic effects that include prevention of ischemic stroke and thrombotic complications. However, few randomized controlled studies have addressed the effect of statins on postoperative atrial fibrillation. The aim of this study was to evaluate the relationship between perioperative statin use and the development of postoperative atrial fibrillation in patients undergoing cardiac surgery. This study was designed as a retrospective case-control study. A total of 212 patients scheduled for cardiac surgery were divided into 2 groups; 102 consecutive patients who developed atrial fibrillation (AF) and 110 consecutive patients who did not (control group). Preoperative fasting and intraoperative statin use was compared between the 2 groups. The incidence of postoperative atrial fibrillation was 35.1%. The in-hospital mortality rate was 1.9%. The incidence of AF was 37.8% in the preoperative statin group and 32.7% in the control group (P =.40). There were no statistically significant differences in the frequency of coronary artery disease, hypertension, diabetes, EuroSCORE, and preoperative creatinine levels between the groups. The in-hospital mortality rate was 0.9% in the statin group and 2.7% in the control group (P =.26). The EuroSCORE, the proportion of patients with diabetes, and preoperative creatinine
