This is the student solutions manual to the textbook: "Calculus" Q: Is this program appropriate for "Best Answer"? I have a question which needs a bounty to be fixed. I tried to edit it to make it more standard and bumped it to a moderator to make it get an answer. But since it's a bug bounty topic, the person who could fix it is not going to touch it, and I could not win the bounty. So I made this question, as a new bounty question, with this title: Best Answer: Discussion on How to achieve default values for a Class construct (eg: long long int int32_t etc.) And inside I wrote the code and explanation, and the answer is over at What is the best way to do this? Is it fair to give a bounty here? I think it's fair, since it's quite like a bug bounty. A: Yes, it's fair. I made it a community wiki (CW) just because, and I can't see any reason not to mark it. The bounty isn't meant to be used as a means to get the answer your way, it's meant to bring attention to the question, which is why it's a bounty.
