We have a requirement to create an existing PHP application (app1) as a web service for mobile use, and this web service needs to take inputs from two other web sites (app2 and app3). Currently app1 is running on an Apache 2.2, PHP 5.2.10 (IIS) with PHP-FPM module. App2 and app3 are running on IIS7.5, PHP 5.3.5 Our concern is that one user can click on app2, let's say, and then come back to app1, and app1 might not have finished its request before the click on app2. This would be good if we could get a chance to notify app1 the result of the request on app2 so that it can handle it as soon as possible. We all know that concurrent requests are not possible if they are from same domain, but my question is - is it possible to share concurrent requests between application and a web app within one domain? If possible, how? A: Hmm, I think it might be possible if you set your app2 and app3 inside app1's config. I'm using multi-site, and I found this option inside the DB -> Template.php -> _configure() (after the function has loaded configurations) -> config('app1', array('enableAc!' => true)); Perhaps it's not the best solution, but it works. David A. Graham: Disclosing Russia's secret interference Published: Friday, May 31, 2007 To the best of my knowledge, there's been no whiff of an investigation of Russian interference in the last election to influence the outcome in any of the fifty states. Not in Florida. Not in Illinois. Not in Wisconsin. Not in Ohio. Not in Pennsylvania. Nor has there been any hint of an investigation in the all important states of Michigan and Minnesota. I don't

Aortic valve calcium (AVC) has been observed in a subset of hemodialysis patients, but it is unclear if AVC is associated with coronary artery calcification (CAC). The imaging of the coronary arteries using CAC scoring provides a noninvasive estimate of coronary atherosclerosis and predicts cardiovascular mortality. The aim of this study is to compare the prevalence and predictors of AVC in hemodialysis patients. A retrospective cohort study of 53 hemodialysis patients was performed at an academic medical center. Whole-body dual-energy X-ray absorptiometry was used to measure AVC. CAC was examined using electrocardiogram-gated computed tomography (CT). Multivariate regression was used to identify AVC risk factors. The mean age was 50 ± 12 years. Only 19% had AVC on CTC. AVC was associated with calcium-phosphate product ($p = 0.01$), parathyroid hormone ($p = 0.01$), and CAC ($p = 0.03$). CAC was associated with AVC ($p = 0.03$). AVC was a marker of advanced age ($p = 0.01$). Patients with AVC were older ($p = 0.01$) and had a greater proportion of older patients ($p = 0.02$). AVC is associated with CAC in a subset of patients with elevated calcium-phosphate product and parathyroid hormone. AVC may be a marker of cardiac hypertrophy related to age

Photo Drag is a handy tool that can help you overcome this situation and customize the avatar of your contacts, helping you faster recognize them based on the image you assigned to each one. In order to properly use the application, you need to have Adobe AIR installed on your computer, as well as a Gmail account to work with. Creative icon changer for Gmail contacts The program helps you customize your Gmail contact lists, by selecting a representative image for each email on that list. This comes in handy in several ways, as you can assign a proper photo to contacts that have stock or abstract images as avatars, assign the company logo to business contacts, or simply associate a contact that has no avatar with a representative image. The photos you select can be drag-and-dropped from your browser or computer directly over your contact, in order to start the avatar assigning process. Handy tool for changing Gmail contact avatars Photo Drag allows you to selectively assign images as avatars to your Gmail contacts, by giving you the opportunity to trim and adjust a photo before setting it as contact icon. Furthermore, you are offered with several predefined icons. The application also saves any custom created avatars into a library, so that you can use them on other contacts with ease. Conclusion All in all, Photo Drag helps you customize your Gmail contact list to a certain extent, by modifying the avatar of each email in the list. Although this does not affect the image of your contacts, it gives you a personalized view over your contact list, which can be synchronized to other devices, such as smartphones that access your Gmail account. Photo Drag Description: • Create beautiful avatars for your contacts' Gmail profiles. • Export avatars to a folder. • Save avatars to a library. • Test avatars before assigning them as contacts. • Export avatars to a device-specific folder. • Seamlessly remove
