But when I'm executing the sed -i "s/models/models" "project_data_storage_model.rfc" so I got the following sed: -e expression #1, char 1: unknown option to `s' I'm not sure if my command needs the space or the number does but I tried both. I tried also using sed -i "models/models" "project_data_storage_model.rfc" But this didn't change anything. A: sed -i is for basic sed, it doesn't support your condition. Try: awk '{if($1=="models/models")print FILENAME}' sed -i "/models/models/d" "project_data_storage_model.rfc" should not enter the patient's room except in the course of his medical care. The officer's belief in justification was not unreasonable. He had just been informed by the neighbor of the patient's suicidal tendencies. It was not until after he had completed his examination of the patient that he informed the officer that he believed the patient was mentally ill and that the patient should be taken to the hospital. Only after he had completed the hospital treatment did he believe the patient was a danger to himself, since the patient was not only a danger to himself but also to others. The officer's belief that he needed the immediate aid of a peace officer to gain access to the patient was reasonable. He was merely doing his duty as an officer. He believed that someone should be present to assist him in removing the patient from the immediate proximity of the apartment and preventing the patient from destroying his own life before he was taken to the police station. The facts and the circumstances surrounding the removal of the patient to the police station after he was treated as an inpatient at the hospital presents a question of the constitutionality of the officer's conduct in removing the patient. However, the officer did not comply with the provisions of the Criminal Code which required that he obtain an order *933 for removal of the patient from a hospital which is not for the treatment of mentally ill persons, as section 77 of the Mental Health Act specifically provides. The officer's contention that section
