CEO Blake Mycoskie, as well as a third of the country’s Super Bowl-winning quarterback Eli Manning, are among 10 new recipients of the 2017 U.S. News & World Report’s annual college rankings of the best schools. The magazine ranked the top colleges based on a variety of categories including academics, student life, graduation rates and tuition costs. The company said the rankings are determined based on information from the National Center for Education Statistics, the American Council on Education, the U.S. News Best Colleges, the College Board, the private college granting university ranking arm Edvisors and other academic data. “As a nonprofit organization, the goal of U.S. News & World Report’s annual Best Colleges guide is to provide prospective college students with the tools they need to become informed, responsible consumers when they make decisions about which college to attend,” said U.S. News Editor-in-Chief Daniel Golden. Mycoskie is a founding board member of Global Citizen, a nonprofit working to improve the quality of life around the world. His company, which is owned by the Dave Thomas Foundation for Adoption, raised $2 million for its adoptive parents foundation. “As a board member of Global Citizen and a founding member of the Adoptive
