Deborah Sundahl Kobieca ejakulacja i punkt G.Q: Angular 7 : NgFor only updating the last children elements I have a list of products that is being generated via Angular's ngFor. All products are structured like this: product1 - details - product2 - details - product3 - product4 You can also see this in this Plunker.

The issue is that when the user opens a product, and then closes it, the product will still be open (i.e. it's being shown). However when you update the product's details, the previous product's details won't be updated. I've tried iterating backwards through the products, but since this is coming from the database and there can be thousands of products, it doesn't work. I'm using Angular 6, and data is stored in a Firebase Database. A: I've figure a way to solve this. Not sure if it's the best way, but here's what I did: I made a new function that is outside of the ngFor loop.

This is the function:

updateChild(currentObject, newObject, key) { this.transactionsArray.forEach((data, i) => { data.indexOf(key) > -1 && (data.children[i].id

=== currentObject.id)? data.children[i].id =
newObject.id : data.children[i] = newObject;
}) } Then I made a component template like this: {{product.id}} {{i}}

“I shall be the lasting monument to the woman who gave to the world the greatest of all gifts.” After celebrating his birthday for 2 days, the King of the Saxon Empire comes to visit the royal palace where the last soldiers of his army await him. The castle is filled with celebrants. The King invites the last two soldiers, Captain Melmoth and Captain Green, to search out their names in the very book they’ve been waiting for their entire lives. As they embark on this journey they remember what they love most in their lives and what they wish to leave behind. They discover the true name of each other: Captain Melmoth is a warrior who kept his silence throughout his life; Captain Green is a lover who risked everything for the love of his enemy.
