What's New In Link Checker For Local Files?

Link Checker for Local Files is an unobtrusive, easy to use and lightweight utility that helps you to check if the links on your computer or server are valid. The best thing about this simple program is that you can check many links at once or you can check your links in loops (i.e. checking each link once in a second or whenever you press the button). Link Checker for Local Files comes handy when testing your links whether they work or not. It checks if the files you have on your computer are accessible and valid. The app can also help you to locate and eliminate the broken links so that you can efficiently update or delete the links that are already expired. There are three main functions to achieve: - Finding links that are disabled - Locating links that are not working - Locate links that are expired The 'Finding links that are disabled' option checks all local files and directories (inside the current directory) and highlights those that are not accessible anymore. This option can be set to look in all files, sub-directories, folders and a custom selection. The 'Finding links that are not working' function is based on a simple 'if-else' check. In other words, this function will search the files and highlights the links that are no longer valid. If the files that are not accessible were HTML files, then the app will also mark links on their elements as invalid. Moreover, this option shows the 'link-to' and 'link-from' broken links. These options can be set to look in the files with the extensions '.php' and '.html' The 'Locating links that are expired' function will check the file and directory of each link and highlight the links that are no longer accessible. There are three ways to do so: check the local file, check the internet and check the links inside the local folder. You can also set the check to be done on every run or you can set it to be done when you double-click on the program's icon. Program Features: There are two operation modes: checking files and checking links. There is no functional difference between them. In the first mode, you can check the files. On the other hand, in the second mode, you can check the links. If you check the files, the program will search for the invalid files on your computer and highlight them. You can select the files by using the usual Windows selection methods
