layer heatmap to ignore drawing events? is there a way to force google maps to ignore drawing events(like mousedown/move/etc) by adding a layer? A: Add pointer-events:none; to the container. See In this example, we don't apply the pointer-events property to any of the elements, only to the container, so that it doesn't prevent any events from taking place on the other elements. I don't think the google map API allows you to set pointer-events, which is why it overrides all of the other mouse events. From the docs: "Custodian elements do not receive pointer events; their events are delegated to other elements within the same collection." Q: android:applyvisibility="true", how to solve? I would like to hide a button in my Android application, and then after a second, I would like to show it, but the button doesn't show. Here is my code: Button nextClick = (Button) findViewById(R.id.nextClick); nextClick.setOnClickListener(new View.OnClickListener() { @Override public void onClick(View view) { myAdapter.hideProgress(); Toast.makeText(getApplicationContext(), "Nothing show", Toast.LENGTH_SHORT).show(); } }); 595f342e71
