every itunes to pc tool and search something. Portable media player windows 7.Q: How to run a function before the pd.DataFrame.head(), without creating new data frames? I would like to run a function before the head() of a data frame. The problem is that at this point in time the data frame is empty. For example: data.head() # this would create a new data frame which I do not need data.apply(function(x) { # I do not want this to happen ... }) I want to run the function and then head() on the same data frame. Any ideas? A: Function data.head returns only first row of DataFrame, not whole DataFrame. So, you can do: df = data.head() df.apply(function(x) { ... }) or, it is more intuitive and isosynthetic method: data.apply(data.head) Q: How to speed up dplyr::summarise function's calculation of averages I am trying to get the summarized averages of numeric variables. For the sake of reproducibility, here is the bare bones of the code: require(dplyr) data(mtcars) mtcars %> 1cdb3666d
