The Codec domain includes audio, speech, images, and video codecs. A media stream can comprise or be composed of multiple media components. The media components can be associated with different coding modes and different bandwidths. For example, the codec can generate a main and a side stream. The side stream can have a smaller bandwidth than the main stream. Additionally, there can be additional streams that follow. As a result, the codec may be needed to have different amounts of processing for the media components with different coding modes and bandwidths.Q: How to print a cell every time for each type from a list? I have a list: with open(logfile, 'r') as f: list = f.read().split(" ") From this list I have to add a new column to print a number for each type from the list. How can I do that? I tried something like this: s=re.split(r'(?
