[The incidence of psychiatric disorders in a general hospital. A study using the MMPI]. The population of outpatients of a general hospital with > 12 beds was examined for psychiatric disorders. Patients were screened by the Structured Clinical Interview for DSM-III-R Axis I and Axis II, and the MMPI. The prevalence of psychiatric disorders was as follows: 66% of the patients had at least one disorder in Axis I, 27% in Axis II, 22% in Axis I and/or II, and 24% in two or more axes. The most prevalent disorders were depressions. We found the following significant differences between groups of patients (Statistical analyses used were the chi<sup>2</sup> test, t test, and analysis of variance): the prevalence of psychiatric disorders in outpatients was much higher than in patients admitted to an inpatient ward, and there were more hospitalized patients with recurrent depressions than outpatients. Attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) in adults: evidence for a developmental process. The age-related and gender-related epidemiology of attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) was reviewed. The salient features of ADHD include the early onset of symptoms, the preponderance of male subjects, the association of ADHD with learning disabilities, and the association of ADHD with substance abuse. A developmental model for ADHD is discussed. Recent studies suggest that ADHD is probably a developmental disorder characterized by abnormalities in brain development and cognitive function. The developmental model of ADHD indicates that ADHD symptoms will diminish in later years. However, the development of ADHD and the development of problems associated with ADHD may occur in a subtle fashion and gradually increase over the life span, making it virtually impossible to diagnose ADHD in adulthood. Early identification and treatment of ADHD is an essential step in preventing the costly problems associated with ADHD. Nathan MacKinnon says he was in tears when he saw how much gold his team won in Thursday's 4-3 shootout victory against the San Jose Sharks at Pepsi Centre. As the semiconductor industry has progressed into nanometer technology process nodes in pursuit of higher device density, higher performance, and lower costs, challenges from both fabrication and design issues have resulted in the development of three-dimensional designs, such as a fin field effect transistor (Fin FET) and the use of a metal gate structure with a high-k (dielectric constant) material. The metal gate structure is often manufactured by using an “gate-last” process in which the final gate structures are fabricated after the source and drain regions are formed. However, there are challenges to implementing such features and processes in complementary metal-oxide-semiconductor (CMOS) fabrication. For example, silicide formation in source/drain regions can cause high resistivity, and it is difficult to achieve contacts with a high aspect ratio in source/drain regions.

dries up and the country slides deeper into chaos. The bombing of residential buildings has killed and wounded civilians on a scale unseen since the 1980s, even as Taliban kidnappings and attacks escalate. The suit, filed in the US District Court in Manhattan, demands the United States pay compensation “of at least $1 billion” to victims of US drone strikes and for failing to block the war. “Our history with the US is one of war and suffering caused by US involvement with our country,” spokesman Suhail Shaheen said of the suit. “Now, after almost two decades of war, the US is continuing to cause harm to Afghan families.” The claim asks the court to assess the extent of harm to the families of three members of the Taliban killed in a November 12 drone strike in Nangarhar, eastern Afghanistan. It also names US President Donald Trump, who has presided over a surge in drone strikes, as a defendant. A month before, a drone strike killed Taliban commander Mullah Mohammed Nur, a top commander in Afghanistan's most deadly Taliban faction, the Haqqani network.
