Walkers completed the walk between Blyth and Annan on Wednesday morning, and it is hoped the £5,000 raised will go to the Kurdi Appeal. Kurds are about to begin celebrating a New Year, and many struggle with life after the tragic loss of their family member Jihadi John. The walkers were members of Paddle for the Kurdi Appeal. Initially the walk was organised around a 10-mile route, but due to health and safety concerns around the Annan Dock, the organisers did a minor alteration to this. The original route passed through the Inland Waterways, and it is this stretch where the walk was completed. Crowds of people on the banks of the canal cheered as they passed, many of whom applauded as they walked by. After leaving the town of Annan, walkers followed the A701 for 12 miles to the village of Blyth, and then back to Annan. Now the fundraising team is looking for sponsors and partners to extend this walk, with a route as far away as Newcastle, Stoke-on-Trent and the Ribbles Valley. In a statement they say: "We are always looking to do more to help the Kurds, and we hope this walk will encourage more people to donate to the cause. "Please help this message be heard and help us to raise as much as possible for the Kurds."
