Institute of Technology, Sciences and the Arts Institute of Technology, Sciences and the Arts (ITSAS) is a professional development institute in the fields of science, technology, the arts and design for students wishing to pursue careers in these disciplines. It is one of six academies of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland. It is located in the grounds of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland on North Brunswick Street. History An important factor in the transformation of the medical profession from the time of the development of cadaveric dissection in the 17th century to the development of graduate medical science was the opening up of a new environment for clinical practice in other subjects such as surgery and anatomy by HIPPOCRATES. One of the first graduates of the new medical school of University College Cork was Terence Dennison Paterson who became, in the course of his clinical work, a founder member of the Irish College of Surgeons in 1872, its first President and founder of the CERVABASE, the first of its kind in Europe and which has become a prototype in Europe for health information systems. The transformation of the environment for medicine in Ireland from the development of the first medical schools in Dublin at University College in 1641 to that of University College Galway and University College Belfast in 1892 was part of the drive to
