Field of the Invention This invention relates to a rotary pump, especially to a high-pressure pump for a fuel supply system of an internal combustion engine. 2. Description of the Prior Art Internal combustion engines with so-called direct fuel injection, in which a fuel jet is injected directly into a combustion chamber, have been known. This direct injection improves the fuel economy of internal combustion engines, especially of spark-ignition engines, compared to engines of the fuel injection type. Such direct-injection engines, however, suffer from the problem that when the engine is driven under high load conditions, the pressure of the fuel supply is so high that cavitation arises in the flow of fuel, resulting in a problem of decrease of the fuel supply durability. Hence, a high-pressure pump has been proposed
