FIFA 22 continues to bring the intensity of the world's most popular and popular sport to the pitch. It also brings the best and most realistic player models ever seen in a soccer simulation, as well as a number of additions that improve the entire game. All of these elements are brought together to make FIFA 22 the most authentic soccer simulation ever. THE REAL GAMEPLAY IN FIFA 22 HyperMotion Technology brings a completely new level of realism to the gameplay of FIFA 22. By looking at real-life football matches played by 22 players, and then using motion capture data, FIFA 22 applies the same intensity to the on-pitch experience that a real match entails. This means delivering an enhanced football experience, with a new sense of speed and intensity, and new animations and reactions. The main new aspect introduced is the AI's behavior, particularly in the way in which players tackle. There are more-maneuverable players, more intelligent, more physical and more aggressive. But be sure to use this feature at your own risk, as it might be more dangerous than usual. Another new feature is that FIFA 22 makes a difference in the way the ball moves. This means you'll experience the unique and exceptional feel of the ball in motion, which can be found only in the sport of soccer. This will bring a level of finesse to the overall gameplay. Features like the AI's behavior, ball control and improved player models represent the most significant game changes since the launch of FIFA 2009, the year that the series first introduced player models. They're also features that players will experience for the first time in a soccer simulation. THE BEST AND MOST REALISTIC PLAYER MODELS EVER Along with new animations, player models and AI behavior, FIFA 22 will now feature more realistic player models than before, thanks to the improved AI. Players now weigh more realistically, move better and react more realistically during every step and tackle, and all of this can be felt when tackling. Additionally, as a result of the addition of motion capture data, players move and behave closer to real players. Players adapt to the movements of their opponent and no longer move the same way or react the same way regardless of the opponent. You'll be able to notice that every action is more accurate and that their movement looks more natural than before.

For example, you' with this bug since last month. I am converting a face video to grey scale for better visualization. I am trying to remove all faces that appear for less than 4 seconds. I am getting the video frames and using openCV to get frames that are selected as faces. I am checking for the facial features in each frame and then subsetting the frames that have no facial features. I am then applying the function `color_space_convert` from openCV to get the desired gray scale image. However, I am seeing an unusual behavior of this function and it is changing the color values to gray scale! The code is as follows: `cv::Mat face_frame(cv::Mat_(480, 640, CV_8UC1), frameNum, face_n); // select face frames if (face_n >= 5 && face_n`
