Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a radio communication system that performs retransmission control in response to an error that occurs in data that is transmitted and received via a radio link. More specifically, the present invention relates to a radio communication system including an addition value generation apparatus that adds the error value of the data that is subject to the retransmission to the original data and transmits the added value to a receiver apparatus. Description of the Related Art A radio communication system using a radio link is known. In the radio communication system, a sender (transmitter) apparatus transmits data that includes error bits to a receiver apparatus via a radio link and the receiver apparatus receives the data via the radio link and then performs demodulation processing on the received data. If a data transmission error occurs, the receiver apparatus causes the sender apparatus to retransmit the data, the receiver apparatus having received data including error bits with the data that has been transmitted by the sender apparatus. Jpn. Pat. Appln. KOKAI Publication No. 2013-51245 discloses a retransmission control method for retransmitting the data that has been transmitted, by which a receiver apparatus can detect an error bit with high accuracy, even when the error bit is detected and demodulated in the demodulation processing. In the retransmission control method, data in which the data that has been transmitted and data in which the data that has been received are recorded in a buffer is generated and a bit error that occurs in data that has been transmitted is detected based on the data that is recorded in the buffer. Specifically, when error detection is performed, the bit error that occurs in the data that has been transmitted is detected according to a detection rule that is set for each bit.By.(JavaScript must be enabled to view this email address) 15 Jan 2016 Ben Platt Photo by Armed group threatens to cut off power to Sanaa's hilly northern suburbs amid criticism over the ruthless way they have carried out attacks that have brought many of them into conflict with the Houthis. The group said on Monday that it had cut off electricity to Sanaa's northern suburbs because residents had not turned in their "illegal weapons." Salam Ahmed said that residents had used the power to supply themselves and their livestock with electricity. "We cut off electricity to areas where residents of Um Saeed (a neighbourhood in the north of Sanaa) use it to make weapons because they do not give up these weapons," he said. Um Saeed is one of the areas of the north of the capital that has been overrun by Houthis. The group has ordered residents to turn in their "illegal weapons" and refused to provide electricity and water. On Sunday, the pro-government information minister branded the Houthis as "terrorists." "We do not agree with their methods and their methods are brutal and destroy the lives of innocent people," said Al-Sabahat Al-Arabiya satellite TV channel. Saleh said that his government would wage an "all-out war" against the Houthis, including security forces. Yemen's government controls only the southern third of the country, while the Houthis control Sanaa and much of the north. Yemen's conflict has attracted foreign powers to a side and fuelled a regional proxy war that has taken a heavy toll on civilians. The war has killed more than 6,500 people since March last year. © 2017 AFPdavidisraelh: Hello, i'm glad you have found the message. There are hundreds of ways to do this, but as it is 3am and i'm a bit stressed today, i'm not sure which way is best. I am employed by the United Nations and work at the UN Human Rights Office in Geneva. I am one of the 25 Human Rights Lawyers who work on UN-HCHR cases, only 5 of us are women. I am one of them and my job is to make sure that the abuses and violations, as happening in Gaza, are investigated and we bring them to the International Human Rights Courts. (Court are the ultimate judicial bodies which take on final decisions on all situations concerning Human Rights.) Let me first say
