GIMP Gimp has had a slow start in the photo editing world, but has recently been gaining ground. It is designed as a low-cost, open-source image-manipulation program that emphasizes small design tweaks over big show-stopping effects. Its layers-based editing system can provide a powerful means of manipulation when used with the right tools. It's not usually thought of as a big photo-editing application, but if you're trying to cut, paste, or retouch with larger files, you can use Gimp to do that, too. * *

A serious downside to Photoshop Elements is that you can't edit video files unless you've gone to the time and effort to do so. To change an image's or video's gamma or hue would require using Photoshop, even though it's not a huge project. If you want to edit video in Photoshop Elements then there are a few workarounds available. Video Editing in Photoshop Elements Since Photoshop Elements doesn't support video, the best way to edit a video file is to use a third-party video editor. And that's what you're going to do in this article. Lightworks Lightworks is a very popular free and open-source video editing application. It is considered the fastest video editor to use, and it has a feature to create slideshows. It costs about $70 to unlock the full set of features. Creating a slideshow in Lightworks is easy and fast, and it's also super easy to create a new video file. Download Lightworks Here DivX Factory Another well-known application is the DivX Factory. This is a free video editor but it's only for editing DivX videos. You should try not to use any other video formats such as AVI or MP4 because, like most software that edits video, it cannot edit these video files. If you use DivX Factory and want to use other video formats you have to make sure the application supports them. Download DivX Factory Here Pixelmator Pixelmator is another free and open-source video editor, and it works in exactly the same way as Lightworks. It is, however, a little harder to use. But, if you're looking for an open-source, free video editor, then Pixelmator is a great option. Download Pixelmator Here Minitube Minitube is a free video player. If you want to edit a video file then the best option is to use this software. For people who are using other video editing software, such as Lightworks, then you can use Minitube to open and edit your videos. Because of the simplicity of the interface, it's a really good video player, and you can find videos everywhere. UNICEF needs $715,000 to pay for the A/H1N1 vaccine in Hong Kong and to keep its life-saving activities going; and $1,315,000 for A/H5N1 vaccine to get HK out of the global H5N1 shadow. Hong Kong's strategic stockpile has remained in the shadow of the global stockpile from mid-2007 until May 2009. WHO has to be ready to also go into action with all possible resources to contain the A/H1N1 and A/H5N1 threats. The Department of Health (DoH) is challenged with maintaining the capacity of local anti-viral pharmaceutical manufacturing. The presentation of UNICEF has been scheduled for September, or after the WHO mission to Wuhan in China. UNICEF has been preparing its program for a 9-month period. The campaign is expected to follow our past efforts in Bangladesh, Pakistan, India and Thailand. The post pandemic period is probably the best opportunity to generate more resources for more programmes than ever before. From a public health and humanitarian perspective, A/H1N1 was a wake-up call that the world still has a long way to travel in its readiness for pandemic influenza. Hong Kong will be the place where A/H1N1 is met. The results will certainly be mixed. HK has followed a thorough public education campaign with excellent coordination between the AEC, the DoH and various stakeholders. Some of the lessons learnt include: there was no need to panic and there was no need to make special arrangements for patients and staff in case of the pandemic. Another lesson learnt is to ensure all means of transportation, including ambulances, were prepared. The DoH should have had already a plan to adopt and include pandemic influenza in its emergency plan. It did not, and this could have lead to severe financial losses and increased casualties. In addition to the public education effort, the follow-up services to patients included the distribution of free masks to staff, medical consultations and influenza-like-illness (ILI) examinations. It was a busy period for Hong Kong health. The AEC needed to keep track of the screening process for people, who were potential carriers of A/H1N1, and who were identified through the ILI examination at the AEC and were referred to the

About Us On the long journey of life, the goal is to be yourself, and if you find that you are not yourself, you had better keep looking until you find yourself. If you don't find yourself, the world is going to find you, they are going to embrace you, they are going to say, "This is the most interesting thing I've ever found". - Lawrence Welk MONTREAL - As of Tuesday, 78% of healthcare workers who were asked said they were feeling healthy, a survey by two leading providers of hospital services found. "We have over 44,000 people who work in the healthcare sector in Quebec," said John-Paul Caron, president of Quebec's main professional association for nurses and healthcare workers (SNMC). "This is good news, as we know that healthcare workers, unlike those in other sectors, are right in the middle of things. They put their hands on them." With the spread of COVID-19, many healthcare workers are working 12-hour shifts and are not sleeping, Caron said, so the survey was important to determine whether they were feeling under pressure. The vast majority of healthcare workers said they had an open conversation with their families about the risks they were exposed to while on the job. The survey, conducted by Nantes-Université hospital in partnership with the SNMC, showed that 78.2% of respondents say they feel healthy. It indicates that 93.7% of all healthcare workers have been taking
