The ASHRAE ANSI/ASHRAE (AS) Standard 183 Revised 2011,. The Chapter provides the description.Friday, April 22, 2011 Spending, Well, Less This year and last year, we made spring cleaning a priority and got pretty much done. We're already a few months behind (still thinking of what we can get done), but between all our electronics and the fact that the kids had been around more this year (shocker! lol), we have a nice pile of stuff to keep us busy. I've been slowly getting back to blogging (well, in the fact that I'm posting daily pictures of my world...only I put most of them on facebook). Anyway, here's what I've managed to get done in the past few weeks (and in case you couldn't tell, I'm a total perfectionist when it comes to getting those extra 10/20/30 likes on facebook! HA): So here's where things stand for today. I hope all our spring cleaning has kept you guys busy. It's been a crazy month (well, OK, it's been a crazy month for spring). Hello world, my name is Amanda and I'm a Mommy to two precious little boys. When I'm not blogging here, I'm chasing my sometimes hyper active and mad little boys around the house, keeping the kitchen clean, and drinking way too much coffee (currently I'm on my third cup) in preparation for the next crazy day in which the boys are up all night! It is with sincere love and gratitude, that I thank you for the opportunity to be your pastor. As you continue to enjoy this “reward” it strikes me that your vote for the presidency isn’t so much an endorsement of me or of what I represent as it is of you and of your leadership as a Christian woman in this world. In the first couple of weeks you and your family have been here in Washington the dominant topic of discussion is the president’s domestic policies and even those of foreign countries. With all due respect I may seem a bit “
