Isolation of 2-acetylaminofluorene-DNA adducts from hepatic DNA in rat by diethyldithiocarbamate chromatography. 2-Acetylaminofluorene (2-AAF) is used to study the modulation of multiple chemical carcinogenesis and the effects of xenobiotics on carcinogenesis. In the case of a single chemical carcinogen and in the absence of xenobiotics, only nonreactive and unstable adducts can be detected and quantified. The isolation of reactive DNA adducts from DNA of the various tissues of the rat and of other species is hampered by the presence of multiple chemically reactive adducts, both unstable and stable, in the crude DNA preparations. We have developed a method that isolates 2-AAF-DNA adducts from rat liver DNA by diethyldithiocarbamate chromatography. Liver samples were treated with diethyldithiocarbamate for 2-5 h, the adducts were desalted, and the nucleic acids were eluted from the column in an alkaline buffer. This purification gave rise to adducts in a ratio of approximately 10:1 adduct:nucleoside for virtually all of the stable nucleoside adducts. Although the diethyldithiocarbamate-chromatography method is relatively time consuming (13 h), the direct isolation of chemically reactive adducts from crude DNA preparations provides an effective procedure that can be automated to screen for the presence of chemically reactive adducts in tissues of different species. Weight discrimination and weight-related victimization among female college students. This study examined weight-related discrimination and weight-related victimization among a sample of college women. University of Colorado students (N = 649, M = 19.74, SD = 2.82) were classified as overweight (BMI = 25.0-29.9) or obese (BMI >= or = 30.0). Female college students reported almost daily exposure to weight discrimination in daily life. They indicated that their weight is used as an excuse for most situations including customer service and work-related situations. College women were 2.2 times more likely to experience weight-related harassment than a woman of normal weight. Relative to a woman of normal weight, overweight and obese women were more likely to report loneliness, hopelessness, guilt, and shame, and to indicate that they had contemplated suicide. Overweight and obese women were

Q: How can i use FTP access from Java? I would like to use FTP access in my Java code and therefore I need an FTP client. I was looking at the Apache Commons project, but I just don't like it. How can I configure these FTP-Requests like simple file copying in the Java SE API? Are there other solutions which fit in my needs? A: Probably it would be the easiest to use apache commons CLI FTP. But it seems the FTP support in jsch is broken, so you might have to port it. A: If you want to use Java and make your program play well with a server (FTP in this case) the FTP classes (apart from Commons) might not help you much. You really need to use the jsch(s) classes if you want to use the actual API on the server side. But as you already say, you might rather want to use the FTP classes. If you don't want to go through all that hassle, I guess you would better use some "hidden gem" anyway. — The N.C. Athletic Trainers' Assn. sued the North Carolina High School Athletic Association in Wake County Superior Court Tuesday seeking a declaration of eligibility rules. The association's suit names N.C. High School Athletic Association executive director Ron Freeman and six members of his staff as defendants. Although a declaration of eligibility rules would not necessarily change the outcome of any athletic competition, the association contends that it would have a "meaningful impact" on the association's ability to function. While a few other states have similar oversight boards, North Carolina is the only state where athletic trainers are vested with authority over the association's rules. Athletic trainers, who work with athletes in sport specific positions, are not medical doctors. In that capacity, they are granted authority to evaluate student athletes and to make recommendations for medical treatments to the school athletic trainers and to the schools with which the association is affiliated. NCAA bylaws give the association the authority to set eligibility rules for interscholastic activities, but leaves to local school boards the authority to set rules for intramural, club or other activities. The association's suit states that it sets eligibility rules and includes all members by invitation or voluntary membership in good standing. "The Association is a private organization of approximately 250 student-athletes and their personal athletic trainers.
