Q: Is there a difference between "that is" and "which is"? In English we say that "I have a friend who was in boarding school when I was in nursery". This is grammatically correct. In other words, we can say that which is. What if we used that which is? Would it be correct or not? P.S. Just to be clear that I really understand the difference between that and which. A: That, in this context, refers to a certain person (who is my friend) and which is refers to a general category (people who were in boarding school during that time). I have a friend who was in boarding school when I was in nursery. or I have a friend who was in boarding school at that time. What to do when you're bored in NYC When you're travelling for several days in a row, one thing that you might find yourself dreading is sitting in your hostel room, which is pretty hard to avoid since you basically live in that room unless you take a stroll down the block every couple of hours to go explore the neighborhood. It's not always easy to find the right environment to go out and explore, you might be at your destination for a few days, and you don't have that many close friends that live in your hostel, so you might end up just sitting in the hostel a lot. But, if you're bored in NYC you actually have a lot to do. After all, you're in the Big Apple, so there's a whole lot to do here. Of course, going to the most popular tourist attractions is the most obvious thing that you can do to get out of your hostel room and away from your computer. If you're going for example to Central Park, it might actually be pretty crowded, but it's still a good way to get out of your hostel room and stretch your legs a bit. There are also loads of museums here, like the Museum of Modern Art or the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and they're some of the most popular museums here, so you can definitely check them out. If you're feeling really adventurous, you could always head over to the Alamo Drafthouse, which is an interesting place where you

Q: Is there a better way to have a variable that determines when to use jQuery.ready()? I'm just wondering if there is a more efficient way to do this so that I don't have to keep constantly refreshing the page. I have a script that loads in if the page doesn't respond within a certain time. If it does load within that time I need the page to be ready. JQuery ready: //declare the type as ready $(document).ready(function(){ //checks to see if page is ready if($.test("this thing inside the thing.)){ console.log("it is ready"); }else{ console.log("it isn't"); } }); Is there a more efficient way to do this so that I don't have to constantly refresh the page? A: You can create a function that will run once the page has loaded, something like this: // Fire the function once page has loaded // Use in your external page as call of this function: // $(document).ready(function() { // yourFunctionHere(); // }); // Then remove this: // // $(document).ready(function() { // // your code // }); // The NBA will likely miss out on the revenue windfall from the NBA Draft Lottery, which produces an average of $8.5 million for each of the first 14 teams, according to an ESPN projection. The NBA's Board of Governors will need to approve the league's $1 billion partnership with the National Basketball Players Association and broadcast partner Turner Sports to operate a weighted lottery, so it is unlikely the NBA would agree to a set of rules that would risk putting more teams in contention for the league's biggest prize. The NBA lottery, which is at the center of two federal lawsuits filed by the players union, will be expanded to 14 teams this year, up from 12, and will be played Wednesday and Thursday nights. To offset the league's loss, a new revenue-sharing model will be implemented, with the league splitting the profits evenly and the teams splitting
