PS4 players who participate in the EA Sports FIFA Ultimate Team™ mode will be the first to experience the new feature. With their initial gameplay data, EA SPORTS has used the insight from real-life players to push the boundaries of movement and mechanics inside FIFA. Starting on Sept. 13, players of the FIFA 22 Demo at E3 will be given an opportunity to try out the new “Motion Tech” feature of gameplay. We’ve made big improvements across the pitch. On Sept. 13, we’ll reveal the new “Motion Tech” feature of gameplay, allowing players to test it out for the first time. What the feature is There are dozens of opportunities and scenarios to use the new game engine. Goalkeeper and defenders have the ability to push players away from the ball when they’re in dangerous positions and there are more than 100 animations to simulate the passion, athleticism and precision of top-level football. We have moved and smashed the barriers of what we have achieved on other platforms, and are delivering gameplay on PS4 that is unparalleled on this generation of consoles. We won’t be revealing the gameplay demo until after the Community Creation Event (CUE) on Sept. 13, but you can expect to see some amazing creations made in the weeks to come. FIFA 17 is a huge game with a lot of content packed inside! Many fans have already helped create the likes of The Village, The Pitch, The Stadium, The Training Ground, The Road to The Glory and the World Selection mode. Community Creation Events (CUEs) are a monthly event that gives players and fans a chance to create and share their own content. Fans are the lifeblood of FIFA, so the more you create, the more content we will bring to the game. We’re starting the Community Creation Event by unveiling a brand-new game mode, The Community Cup. The Community Cup will be a single-player mode where community created content will compete against one another to take down the FIFA Ultimate Team brand. Visit FIFA.com/CreateMode to check out the official rules and timeline for the FIFA CUE and begin creating. We have also introduced a new in-game news hub that combines the news, community features, gameplay editor, and our live broadcast, making FIFA even more interactive and fun to play.
