The new Eclipse is connecting to the old Google account but if I try and change the preferences I don't see the Color schemes at all, neither the Preferences, Customize, I don't know if this may be the case but when I try to "Show View Options" it doesn't show anything at all. (Note: I am using the Terminal to open up eclipse -I've tried to run it through the GUI still nothing) A: In the launch config, you can hit the tab and choose color to see it. Costume Thursday, 18 June 2012 In the local river, every time there is a flood, there are lots of rotting dead fish. After a recent flood there were 6 dead fish hanging on the shore, mostly carp and eels. I was wondering how this would go along with a restoration project when I saw them. I would like to use them in the renovation of the river bank and the temples downstream. This is what you get when you put a dead eel in the river! Wednesday, 17 June 2012 Here comes the summer time and I have purchased flowers, which you can see here. They are quite big and they need very much water, to

My app have two activities A and B. If A is the main activity, user is not allowed to start B. When user presses the home button, B would be started because it should be "more important". How to find out if B is the main activity? I was thinking on monitoring the /proc/pid/exe file to see if it's executable by the process id or not. Is there any better way of doing it? A: This is what you should use: import android.app.KeyguardManager; import android.os.Handler; import android.os.SystemClock; import android.os.Binder; import android.os.IBinder; public class SafeActivityHandler extends Handler { private IBinder mBinder; public SafeActivityHandler(Looper looper) { super(looper); } @Override public void handleMessage(Message msg) { super.handleMessage(msg); if (msg.what == Binder.MSG_KEYGUARD_CHANGED) { return; } if (msg.what == Binder.MSG_SCREEN_ON) { return; } if (!(msg.obj instanceof KeyguardManager)) {
