Smart Pause – The idea of Smart Pause (new to FIFA 20) is to move the action of the game to before or after important shots and decisions; so that moments like shots or tackles are more important to how the gameplay feels. In these cases, the player will be able to view crucial elements of the game (such as player positioning, in-game abilities or future paths) at a slower, more in-depth pace. We also introduced a few new features and tweaks to how we've set up FIFA 20: Positioning – The transfer market has moved into a more advanced phase. At the end of the last transfer window, players had certain attributes that made them more or less appealing than others in certain positions. This was a balancing act. While it was easy to see players like Nacho Monreal who was only available as a defender, better options were available in other positions. The positions were set up based on a balance between what players are typically given and what we are hearing from fans and media. So while players like Paul Pogba in his traditional free role is less attractive, perhaps a box-to-box midfielder like Ander Herrera is more what people are looking for. We've also taken these positions and asked fans and media to pick their favorite players in a poll. Players are voted on based on who they feel has the best combination of player and club skills. This should hopefully tell us more about what fans and media are looking for. We'll be updating the poll throughout the season. Design Team - Speaking of balancing, we have introduced two new features from our Design Team. Design Team - New Design Features These features are designed to work with the new positioning system. We are still testing and refining these features, but we are excited to be bringing new concepts and ideas to the series and hope to get your feedback as we continue to improve. Offside Impact – To make sure a ref can make the best decision, we have altered the offside touch (offside if the ball crosses the goal line). So as you might see, you might now be able to actually see the player offside if the ball doesn't reach their teammates. Previously the ball reaching the goal line did not mean the player was offside. Defending Trajectory - To know which direction to deploy a defender
