The application gives you the possibility to check out a list with programs that have access to the Internet on your computer. What's more, ENSOFTY Internet Access Control lets you check out a list with all tools that are allowed by the user to gain connection to the Internet. In addition, you can protect your system from websites that contain malicious content. Bottom line All things considered, ENSOFTY Internet Access Control comes packed with basic features for helping you protect your computer from malicious websites. On the downside, there's no support for a help manual, which may pose some problems to less experienced users who cannot decode the settings on their own. It hasn't been updated for a while so you can make use of its capabilities especially on older operating systems, like Windows XP, Vista and 7. EnsoSoftY Internet Access Control is a free and simple tool that lets you check out a list with all programs that have access to the Internet. In addition, it provides you with a list of all Internet tools that the user of your computer is allowed to access. Any websites that might contain malicious content or may harm your computer are blocked immediately. Watch out for misleading websites. (The BlueBar has no spyware in it.) Key features: - No configuration or installation, just a double-click launches it - It lets you view a list of tools that have access to the Internet, as well as a list of all tools that a user is allowed to gain access to the Internet - It provides you with a list of all websites that may contain malicious or unwanted content. It has been tested thoroughly. - This program is completely free and comes with absolutely no strings attached. - Delete tools and websites - Customize the tool (save settings, enable automatic launch at startup, check spelling errors....) - Taskbar shortcut - Help file Some security vulnerabilities that allow miscreants to gain control of your computer include things like: - Web browser toolbar hijacking - Malware redirect virus - Adobe Flash plug-in viruses It's important that you keep safe online, because if you do not, you may find yourself the victim of online fraud. So, make sure that you're aware of the security loopholes that may expose your computer to threats. Keeping Your Computer Safe Online Try to avoid phishing scams by being aware of the fake websites that are designed to steal your personal information. These sites make it look like your bank website and actually require your password, credit card number and other personal information in order to confirm that you are logged into their site. To avoid such scams, always double-check the site's logo, address, date and time before revealing any personal information. Play it safe by keeping your computer updated by using Internet Explorer and Firefox. If you are willing to check out a website that is safe, try to select the browser extension first. Make sure that it is a site extension and not a plugin. You can always disable them from Internet Explorer and Firefox. In case you suspect that a site may be malicious, double-check it by clicking on the padlock. In case you are still not sure about the legitimacy of a site, click on the padlock in order to
