The state of the adrenergic nervous supply to the bronchi and of the pulmonary blood supply was studied on 32 corpses with fatal bronchitis and pneumonia. A high adrenergic innervation of the bronchial tree (the nervus vagus) and the bronchial arteries was revealed. The majority of the patients had a compensatory increase of the adrenergic nervous supply to the bronchial tree. A compensatory, infrequent decrease of the adrenergic innervation of the bronchial arteries was also observed. The relationship of the changes in the adrenergic innervation of the bronchi and bronchial arteries to the course of the pathological process and the role of the nervous system in the pathogenesis of bronchitis are discussed. The involvement of the bronchial circulation in the development of the main types of bronchitis, bronchial asthma, and bronchial carcinoma is particularly stressed.Today's Democratic Presidential race is getting ugly. Today on CNN, Democratic Presidential candidate Hillary Clinton was seen insulting Bernie Sanders supporters and comparing them to racist Tea Party supporters: I would say there is a difference between being passionately pro-choice and being pro-choice in the context of racist eugenicists in the 19th Century comparing us to a monkey. Bernie Sanders' campaign staff let CNN know that Mrs.

Clinton's comments are lies and that she should resign: It's unfortunate that Hillary said Bernie supporters were like a cult. That is not true. But if she's going to make these types of comments, she'd better resign. Hillary Clinton is just plain wrong. Her statement is unnuanced, inappropriate and needs to be withdrawn. If that's not the case, she needs to say so and withdraw her comment. /*

Return to Kanopy. Use of a controlled-release tacrolimus formulation with cyclosporine in kidney and lung transplantation. We performed a controlled-release (CR) tacrolimus (CRL) therapy trial in kidney and lung transplant recipients. One hundred fifteen patients received either CRL plus cyclosporine (n = 62) or azathioprine (n = 53) as primary immunosuppression. Pre-transplant functional classes included 24 patients in class I (25%), 59 in class II (61%), 12 in class III (12%), and 2 in class IV (2%). Induction therapy was used in 67% of patients. Maintenance immunosuppression consisted of CRL, azathioprine, and corticosteroids. Conversion to CRL was as follows: more than 6 mo, 30%; 6 mo, 23%; 3 mo, 14%; 2 mo, 9%; and less than 1 mo, 11%. Two patients never converted to CRL. Compared to patients receiving azathioprine plus CRL, patients receiving CRL monotherapy had higher CRL levels immediately after conversion. No difference in patient survival was observed between the groups. Biopsy-proven acute rejection occurred in 16% of the CRL group and in 29% of the group receiving CRL plus azathioprine. One patient in the CRL group died of an infection, whereas 15% of the azathioprine group died of infection. Myelosuppression was not observed in the CRL group. The incidence of hypertension was less than that in azathioprine-treated patients, and there was no difference in the incidence of diabetes mellitus. The incidence of gastrointestinal mucositis was more frequent in patients receiving CRL monotherapy, but less frequent in patients receiving CRL plus azathioprine. Compared to the azathioprine group, patients receiving CRL as primary therapy had a higher incidence of acute rejection and a lower survival rate. The incidence of myelosuppression was similar to that observed in patients receiving azathioprine. In conclusion, the use of CRL
