The "Saturday Morning Children's Show" is a weekly TV program on national public television station WPTZ (PBS) in Buffalo, New York. It consists of original sketches written by two college students and produced by a third, including recurring sketches Mynx and When Things Go Wrong. Original puppets show up in some of the sketches, but The Garbage Man, who is seen almost exclusively in the opening credits, rarely appears on screen. The show aired on WPTZ from April 15, 1975 to June 23, 1997. The show currently airs every Saturday on the Morning Zoo TV channel. The first appearance of The Garbage Man was in the second "For the Love of Mice" sketch, which aired on April 15, 1975. It appears as the TV announcer in the opening, announcing the three characters - Mouse, Bat and Mouse, before the weather. Each week, a new set of characters appear in "The Garbage Man is in Charge," made up of the main group, plus the Garbage Man and Gremlin. The Garbage Man episode "Largeness & Leanness" (May 12, 1976) was the first to feature a child actor to voice both Mr. Garbage and The Garbage Man. The Garbage Man appeared in the first cartoon in the live-action Saturday Morning Children's Show, "The Garbage Man in Space." The 30-minute cartoon was co-produced by Sandy Dorfman, creator of Action Force and The Crayon Challenge, and was seen regularly in the final segment of the show. Beginning with episode #

Dare to go backwards? Children's curiosity about disappearance and the question 'Where do babies come from?' Dyads in a dance. The experiences of children about the process of giving birth are explored in this observational research. Children's search for an explanation about the most basic biological question about life "Where do babies come from?" suggested I formed a group of children between the ages of 4 and 11 years who were born in Auckland, New Zealand. Using photo-elicitation, brief interview, personal accounts, and thematic analysis, the paper describes how children I studied attempted to reconcile the contradictory information they had received about the process. The results of the study suggest a five-stage conceptual model, in which the problem is addressed by moving backwards from the result in order to obtain an explanation or understanding. The data suggests that this backwards movement is an important educational and psychological process in childhood and adolescence. 9-3-4-1 9-3-4-1 was a charting pattern used for British Rail Class 90 and Class 913 Electric Multiple Units introduced between 1976 and 1998. 9-3-4-1 locomotives were used on the Hammersmith & City line to the Metropolitan line and the North London line.
