You are here Welsh Republicans Ron Edwards Ron Edwards (Cofie Morgan) was born at Traeth Mawr Farm in 1869. He studied at Llanfyllin Grammar School and then worked with his father on the family farm. He became an apprentice at the Swansea Foundry in 1885, but had to abandon the apprenticeship when his eyesight began to deteriorate. He had to give up smoking, and in 1886, began work in an optician's shop at Swansea. He completed his apprenticeship in 1887 and became a journeyman, when he opened his own optician's shop at 35 Oxford Street, Swansea. This was the largest optician's shop in South Wales at the time. It was here that he was to meet Thomas Ceiriog Hughes, who worked with him, and the pair of them were to go on to form the cell that would be a cornerstone of the newly founded Welsh National Movement. They were among the first members of the Radical Association in 1899. In 1899 he founded the Wrexham Medical Society to support Welsh Radicals, including Thomas Hughes. In 1902 Edwards wrote for 'Voice of Wales' the first Welsh language paper, the 'Yr Wher'. He was involved in all the major events of the first decade of the century – the formation of the South Wales Central Welsh District in 1907, the founding of the Welsh Socialist and Labour Party, and the appearance of Welsh question in the 1911 census. In 1913, he became secretary of the party, and remained so until his death in 1932. In 1912 Edwards was elected to the Parliament of the United Kingdom, the only member of the party to do so. He represented the Western Division until 1919, when he was elected for the Rhondda, and became a member of the National League for Rights of Man. In 1920, he was the standard-bearer at the London Olympic Games, and in the same year he founded Welsh London University. In 1923 he resigned from the party and stood as an independent candidate in the Bethnal Green by-election, but failed to win the seat. In 1924, after returning to the party, he lost his Rhondda seat on a republican platform, on which he stood as an independent candidate. In the 1929 Rhondda by-election he again failed to win, and he died in 1932. The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultiv

Q: In my Rails app, why won't I get "No such file or directory - open /var/app/Settings.sqlite" when I run my migrations? In my Rails app, I have a migration that creates a file. The path that's specified in the migration file contains some spaces in it, which I've been told is not a valid file path. I get an error like this: db/migrate/my_migration_here.rb:14:in `block in up': No such file or directory - open /var/app/Settings.sqlite (Errno::ENOENT) I've tried replacing the spaces with underscores, and even copying and pasting from Stack Overflow, but I always get this error. Where in the Settings.sqlite file is there a space in it, and how can I fix this? A: The problem is that you're using spaces in the path. Spaces in paths are significant in SQLite, and mean something different than they do in other file systems, like Windows. Try this in a shell instead of your Rails migration: sqlite3 Settings.sqlite Q: What is the use of EFI/Ubuntu/shimx64.efi? For Ubuntu image building what is the use of EFI/Ubuntu/shimx64.efi file? ubuntu/efi/usb.img is the expected target image for UEFI booting and x86/boot/ubootx64.bin is the bootloader that boots UEFI boot. Why is the shimx64.efi file is there in ubuntu/efi folder? I can't understand the purpose of this file. A: shimx64.efi is part of kernel, which is used to transfer to UEFI compatibilized loader. With this efi files, basic UEFI booting is support, so you can build UEFI bootable image.
