After installing this program, you can find the.A novel adenovirus that targets prostate cancer cells and LNCaP cells via active targeting and coxsackievirus and adenovirus receptor-mediated endocytosis. A recombinant fiber-modified adenovirus has been developed that includes an affinity ligand for prostate cancer and LNCaP cells. The ligand (Tn3-IgG) is an extra-cellular domain of the Transthyretin-related protein, which binds to surface glycoproteins on LNCaP and DU145 cells. In addition, the fiber gene is mutated to confer binding to Coxsackie and adenovirus receptor (CAR) on prostate cancer cells. An in vivo safety evaluation showed no clinical evidence of toxicity, but demonstrated loss of anti-adenovirus antibody response in animals administered Tn3-IgG. Tn3-IgG-targeted adenovirus produced a productive replication cycle in tumor cells, but not in normal prostate cells. The Tn3-IgG-modified adenovirus demonstrated enhanced in vitro killing of prostate cancer cells. Efficacy was apparent in both LNCaP and DU145 cells. In vitro retention of adenovirus at the tumor site was also demonstrated. The use of a receptor-targeted gene transfer system that replicates selectively in tumor cells provides a novel strategy for increasing the therapeutic index of adenovirus-mediated gene transfer.[Third-party risk in the public health: the public in the public health system].
