Get a handle on how to use the interface Figure 2-4 shows the familiar opening screen where you have the option of adding text, selecting a new document and opening a new image, or opening an existing file. **Figure 2-4:** The Photoshop interface is familiar to everyone. In Figure 2-5, I've selected the Grid option and set the size of the preview image to 50 percent. This keeps the original file and the layer preview window both the same size, but the layer window is at the size I want. You can use the layers tab to rearrange or hide the layers, but that also hides the image. If you choose Layer Mask, you can move the original image beneath the layer window to reveal it as in Figure 2-6. Or if you want to use the original layer as a background for other elements, you can move the layer to the top of the stack and move the background around to get the effect I've achieved in Figure 2-7. **Figure 2-5:** Set your viewing options to 50 percent for the Grid option. **Figure 2-6:** Use the layers tab to show and hide layers. **Figure 2-7:** Layer mask can be a powerful editing tool. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a color filter suitable for use as a color-filter array of an image sensor or the like, and a method for producing the same. 2. Description of the Related Art A charge coupled device (CCD) image sensor has a color filter array comprising a plurality of color filters of three colors of R (red), G (green) and B (blue). There are two types of color filter arrangements: one is a primary color arrangement in which all of the filters are filters for respective colors of R, G and B, the other is a complementary color arrangement in which the red filter is combined with the green filter, and the green filter is combined with the blue filter. As shown in FIG. 4, in a typical example of the complementary color filter, the red filter, the green filter and the blue filter are arrayed at the corner, the inside and the center of an image sensor. In general, in order to produce a color filter, a color resist (hereinafter referred to as a "resist") used is formed by patterning on a glass substrate, the resist having a coating layer made of photoresist material. The coating layer is a photosensitive layer that, when exposed to light, undergoes a chemical reaction as a function of the intensity of light. Then, the glass substrate is etched to produce a resist pattern. Then, the resist is developed and then, in a case where the primary color arrangement is adopted, the photosensitive layer having a coating layer pattern corresponding to the R, G and B filters is subjected to a treatment to remove selectively the coating layer pattern corresponding to the R filter. In a case where the complementary color arrangement is adopted, the photosensitive layer having a coating layer pattern corresponding to the R, G and B filters is subjected to a treatment to remove selectively the coating layer pattern corresponding to the R filter. Then, the resist pattern is utilized as a mask to perform dry etching on the glass substrate to form a color filter, and then, any remaining resist is removed. The above-mentioned method for producing the color filter by use of the resist is defective in that, where the dry etching is carried out with use of the patterned resist as a mask, the glass substrate is etched not only in a deep region as a pattern but also in a shallow region as a portion of a resist pattern, so that the color filters of a deep-etched type are formed and the color filters of
