Normally, the sender will set the bds request flags to reflect the source of the packet, and the BDA will automatically interpret them. However, if you do not set the flags, the BDA will interpret them as follows: 0x00: Not-a-BDS request This is a PTP request. The associated bds descriptor will not be used. 0x01: Internal message from TISA This is an internal (undocumented) message from TISA. 0xFF: Not-a-BDS request This is a PTP request. The associated bds descriptor will not be used. This is why, when you receive a "Not-a-BDS request" packet, you get a PTP message. About the "TISA"? The TISA is the TSA's version of the BDA's simplified/minimal BDI structure. The TISA does not need to know the BDI size, and so the TISA uses a minimum number of bits for its definition, however, TISA still allows up to 2^{64} BDSs to be mapped to it. This means that TISA has the same memory capabilities as the BDA. TISA allows you to map as many BDSs as necessary to it, and it is the BDA's responsibility to assign valid BDSs and the TISA will understand them. The "TISA" was created by the TSA to reduce the BDA's size.

A list of the top 5 tech startups of the past 12 months The Internet has given everyone access to a plethora of information and tools for everything from learning how to cook to sharing virtual hugs. These days, the technology available on the Internet can make our lives easier, faster, better. However, with all the opportunity to advance our knowledge, there is always a danger of losing touch with the world. This is especially true when it comes to essential information like the time and date, a weather forecast, the stock market, world news, and more. There's an app for that. For those with a passion for the Internet and its list of endless possibilities, technology startups are a great avenue for a fulfilling career. However, before you begin your journey as a tech entrepreneur, it is important to understand the difference between being a tech startup and what these startups actually do. Advertisement Startups are defined as any business with fewer than five employees, and the founders usually do most of the work. Many startups look for investors to offer monetary backing. While being a tech startup is not a new concept, the rise of the Internet and what we now call the Silicon Valley is what allows for startups to be more successful than they ever have been before. The Internet provides everyday people with access to information that has usually been reserved for the few. With the advances in digital technology, everyday people can now share their ideas, knowledge and opinions on a global scale. In some instances, this has led to a plethora of intellectual property being created in the form of patents and trademarks. Let's break down each of the top 5 tech startups of the year, including their creation, the idea, investors, their funding, and where they are now. 5.
