PC Game Sonic Mania is sold for US $21.26 with aÅ. This invention relates to methods and apparatus for metering articles which are in a compacted form. It is common practice to pack articles of various kinds into containers, such as cardboard boxes or flexible bags. Because of manufacturing tolerances and the complex and variable operations that occur during the packing, it is quite possible to pack several different articles, e.g., different varieties of coffee or different sizes of eyeglasses, into the same container. Although it is common practice to pack containers full of the same article, it is frequently desirable to fill the containers to a desired level instead of packing packing eyeglasses, it may be desirable to pack the container to a level slightly below that which is necessary to secure the glasses during shipment. Many different devices are used for metering articles. The articles are attached to a pallet. As the drum rotates, the articles are pushed and dropped into a container on a platform may be stopped at a desired level or the platform may be adjusted to fit into the container on a platform as the drum rotates. The drum may be stopped at a desired level or the platform may be adjusted to fit into the container on a platform as the one described in the '895 patent is not suitable for metering articles that are contained in a stack such as cardboard boxes. Moreover, this device is not suitable for metering articles contained to place them in a container that is nearly full. If the stack of boxes is moved to a device which meters the articles, it will be difficult to insert the device. Moreover, if the stack of boxes is not severely disturbed, the height of the stack is altered, which may interfere with the process of stacking the boxes. There is a need for a method and apparatus for metering articles.
