For beginners to Photoshop, the Adobe Color Picker (the new Tab strip control) is a priceless tool to save time and make color mixing a breeze. For advanced users, the Adobe Shadow/Highlight tool is a must-have. The following sections describe the functions of the various tools that you find in Photoshop. Cropping Cropping is the process of moving or moving and shrinking an image. This process allows you to manipulate the image using the Crop tool — which is a large rectangle with an arrow on the left and right side of the rectangle. To use the Crop tool, follow these steps: 1. Select the Crop tool, which is located in the top-right area of your workspace. 2. Drag the cursor around the area where you want to crop the image. 3. Click and drag the corners of the image to make the cropped area larger or smaller. 4. Click the image to deselect the crop. 5. Press Enter or return to save the crop and return to your previous view. Figure 8-1 shows the Crop tool. Figure 8-1: The Crop tool allows you to edit your image by cropping out unwanted areas. Presets TIP When you first open a new image in Photoshop, you see a tab with your name on the top. To open another new image in Photoshop, click the tab. This makes it easier to work on multiple projects without switching between images. Presets are customizable templates that you use to apply looks to your images. You can create your own presets or you can download them from Photoshop's website. To create your own preset: 1. From the Window menu, choose Presets. The Presets dialog box appears, as shown in Figure 8-2. Figure 8-2: Use presets to customize your photos in ways you couldn't otherwise. 2. Choose the preset that you want to apply. 3. Click OK. To use a preset that's already been created for you, choose File⇒New

Preset. Aligning an image to the right Aligning a photo in the vertical or horizontal direction is called cropping. You can use the Crop tool to define the exact dimensions of a crop for vertical and horizontal alignment. To use the Crop tool

Q: How to upgrade to Ubuntu 12.10 from 12.04 without losing the saved data on my home partition? I am using Ubuntu 12.04 as my OS. Today i read that i need to update my OS to Ubuntu 12.10 by installing update-manager-core package. My problem is that i don't have enough space in my home partition, and i don't want to lose my saved data and what not, is there a way around or should i create a new home partition? A: If you have sufficient disk space, download the images of 12.10 and choose "Try Ubuntu" from boot menu. Or upgrade to 12.10 using the Update manager. You will get a prompt on disk quota. Choose "Upgrade" to continue. Follow the on-screen instructions until your system is updated to 12.10. You will have updated to 12.10 with no loss of data. However, it is recommended to back up all your data using a Live CD/DVD of 12.10 or other Live CD/DVDs or simply use Cloud backup services and keep your data safe. THE very first Formula One Grand Prix I ever followed as a fan was the 1980 Monaco Grand Prix. The Monaco Grand Prix was, and is still, the only Grand Prix to take place on an artificial track – the road course – surrounded by over one million people at the end of a gorgeous day, and it was magical. It was in Monaco that I met my childhood hero, Ayrton Senna, who was racing that year in his third season of F1. It was also in Monaco that I saw my first F1 race; the Grand Prix of Spain. My parents were so excited, my mother, in particular, was absolutely beside herself. She had done it! She had gone to a Grand Prix. If only I could have been there. Senna has been gone for 16 years and with the death of another F1 great, Michael Schumacher, on Sunday, I am reminded of the life that was taken away from all of us, and also that we only have to look at

Schumacher's life to see just how lucky we are to have the sport we love. Michael Schumacher has been a victim of his own success, his own continuing, seemingly unending, rise in popularity has also put him in an intense spotlight that has created a halo effect of villainy

What's New In?

Bette Midler is returning to the Great White Way. The 69-year-old actress and comedian has been announced as the new star of the revival of the musical Gypsy, which will begin previews on Broadway in March. Midler has made a name for herself on the screen for her quirky and empowered performances in films like Hairspray, Beaches and St. Elmo's Fire. She also provided voices on The Simpsons and recently released a Netflix stand-up special, But Midler has slowly been making her way back to the stage, recently appearing in productions including Hamlet, The Cher Show, and the 2019 revival of The Will Rogers Follies. The Gypsy casting announcement comes just days after Christina Aguilera was announced as the lead in Lin-Manuel Miranda's Tony Award-winning musical Hamilton. Midler and Aguilera both won Tonys for their movie work, with Midler taking home Best Actress for her performance in Big. Midler will next be seen in the film The Hunter in 2019 and the comedy drama The Best of Enemies in 2020. She recently returned to the studio to record her most recent album, I'll Never Love This Way Again. Q: Can mhb using SQL requests? Good evening. I'm having trouble on an webapp. It has 2 webapp that were made and are working fine. Now, I want to see if I can re-use some logic and I come across the following situation, I have a Users table with the following fields: id fName sName The User table has this status field that indicates if the user is marked as active or inactive. As the logic if an user is marked as inactive it will not be possible to use the public webapp that contains the MainPage.php file. So, I thought to create 2 other user tables that will store the status the user will have and whenever the user wants to publish the data of the website, the request will be done on the AspNetWeb.php file using the UserID that is related to the user in this active or inactive status. Can somebody give me an idea on how to store the users that are not active using SQL? A: I think you need to store the inactive users separately, using a DB table name UserStatus. You can query to get users which are active and inactive
