Donald Trump has sent an extraordinary warning to Saudi Arabia that if it does not “ease” economic pressure on Qatar, “great pain” will follow the Gulf state, saying he would not be scared to “terminate” the lucrative US defence contract which is the mainstay of the Saudi economy. A string of severe sanctions against Qatar, which has been accused by the US and Gulf Arab states of supporting terrorism, comes after the Qatari emir, Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad al-Thani, cancelled his meeting with Mr Trump in a sign of the increasing strain on the Gulf kingdom’s relationship with Washington. Reacting in the Oval Office on Thursday to the row, Mr Trump appeared to confirm reports that the US would terminate its military operations at a military base in Qatar, saying: “We are not looking to get involved in the military situation in Qatar. If we are, we have the absolute power to do that.” When he was asked if that threat was made in order to compel Qatar to drop the Palestinian militant group, the Muslim Brotherhood’s political wing, he replied: “It’s going to be up to them to decide if they want to continue the alliance or not.” The President then boasted about his success in forcing Germany and Turkey to pull their forces out of Syria and Turkey’s leader, Recep Tayyip Erdoğan, shot back, saying: “You should think twice before threatening us with cancelling [defence] deals.” Mr Trump said he would be willing to “terminate” the Al Udeid air base deal, the main pillar of Saudi Arabia’s economy which is worth more than $10bn (£8bn), if Qatar was not cooperative. The President also suggested Saudi Arabia could “punch back” and meet US demands, saying: “As far as Saudi Arabia is concerned, they should take it up with [Palestinian militant group] Hamas.” Mr Trump had also warned Qatar, after meeting with the head of the Palestinian militant group Hamas, Khaled Mashaal, that it was a “strategic partner” with “the same people that we are fighting” and that he should “show them love”. The US accused Qatar of supporting terrorism in the region and cut its diplomatic ties on June 5. Sheikh Tamim agreed to

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a lens module, and more particularly to a lens module having a pivot shaft. 2. Description of the Related Art A conventional lens module has a lens set and a lens barrel. The lens set receives light and transmits the received light to the lens barrel via a barrel. The lens barrel is movably connected to the lens set via a pivot shaft. The pivot shaft is typically press-fitted in the lens barrel. However, it is necessary to precisely align the pivot shaft with the barrel while the pivot shaft is press-fitted into the barrel. Thus, the lens barrel usually has to be carefully manufactured to result in a high manufacturing cost. In addition, the barrel is also subject to a high failure rate. Furthermore, when being pressed-fitted, a frictional force is generated between the pivot shaft and the barrel. For example, when the pivot shaft is rotated, the barrel has to be rotated accordingly. The frictional force results in a weaker connection between the pivot shaft and the barrel. Thus, the lens set has to be precisely manufactured to avoid any play of the lens set. However, this results in a higher manufacturing cost and a lower manufacturing efficiency.

Nov. 21 (Bloomberg) -- Saudi Aramco, the world’s biggest listed oil producer, plans a share sale that will help boost employees’ pay as crude rebounds from the lowest in almost 30 years and the company confronts the fallout from the stock market plunge. The state-owned company is considering a split that will allow it to raise $30 billion through its Riyadh-listed Aramco Public Investment Company. The IPO is expected this month, according to people familiar with the plan. The extra revenues will fund a revision of the company’s incentive scheme, one of the people said. Aramco’s “Main Share Sale” is part of a government plan that aims to transfer some oil assets to the private sector and boost capital spending to aid the government’s economic recovery. The company has agreed to sell stakes in 50 developing oil fields to private investors through an auction, while it plans to sell assets in the $12 trillion-a-day commodity market. “The share offering is mainly to boost shareholder capital that will be used for other projects, and not to boost profitability
