WASHINGTON — President Trump was panned from both left and right over the weekend, after mocking a young man who had said he was “born in a women’s prison,” and had encouraged him to run for Congress. The exchange, which was filmed and posted to Twitter by a local Fox News reporter, went viral on Saturday, and drew outrage from both sides of the aisle and from Democratic elected officials across the country. Mr. Trump has apologized for his mockery, saying he had “not meant a compliment” in mocking the hopeful congressional candidate, and suggesting he was trying to mock people with the condition “Trumpenitis.” But he has insisted he was merely playing “a joke” and has not actually changed his opinion on people with that condition. I've got the below so far: rule "Create New Document" when $d : Document(id!= null) then $d.create(); end But that doesn't quite work, it seems to ignore if the ID is null and always creates a new document, not one that already exists. I know I need something like the below, but I'm having trouble getting it working: rule "Create New Document" when $d : Document(id!= null) then $d.not() exists(node(id == $d.id())) end A: Using exists doesn't work as you want, because it's going to check the whole document(field). In Dbunit I would use updateNode as a part of a test case in a test for the new document. You can use updateNode(Document.class) to update a specific field (which you want).
