A group of "environmentalists" is scheduled to show up at Gov. Rick Snyder's office Wednesday, June 20, wearing masks, pretending they are enforcing a ban on Enbridge's Line 5 oil pipeline. The so-called "Eco-Warriors" will arrive at the Capitol to claim that they will not allow Snyder to grant an emergency stoppage for Line 5. They've been sending out about 60 such do-not-reply mass mailings using an email account called eco-warriors@tinuket.org. Will they be allowed to speak at the Capitol when they arrive? Will the Governor or the State Capitol Police be convinced to allow them to speak? Here are a few reasons why this "environmental activists" effort is not credible at all. First, the nature of the threat: By all accounts, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has already made its assessment of the condition of the Line 5 pipeline. The line is a 55-year-old steel pipeline, protected by a double-wall of steel. It has been inspected by various inspectors over the years. An earlier spill from a similar pipeline failed to damage the environment: A: Line 5 is a non-hazardous oil pipeline owned by Enbridge that crosses the northern portion of the Straits of Mackinac (Michigan/Canada), is 284 miles long, and delivers crude oil from Superior, Wisconsin to Sarnia, Ontario, Canada. B: The main problem with Line 5 is that it has a leak in its pipe that caused a spill about 12,000 gallons in May 2010. The leak was detected by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) in May 2010. The line was shut down immediately to identify and fix the leak. The pipe was repaired and the leak was plugged shortly after the spill occurred. The Line 5 spill, however, has not been shown to cause a long-term environmental problem. It has affected wildlife in only a limited area of the lakes and marshlands of the Superior area and also in the Kalamazoo River. Second, the execution of a "ban" would prove to the rest of the United States that Michigan has no control over its own borders, and especially that of the Straits of Mackinac. Enbridge's Line 5 pipeline crosses the Straits of Mackinac, but the pipeline is a Canadian import of Canadian crude oil. Third, by allowing Enbridge to

The invention relates to a method and apparatus for reproducing information recorded on a recording disc, especially a compact disc, in accordance with the preamble part of the main claim. Such a method and such an apparatus are known from "Data Recorder MCM compact discs," Philips (1990) Technical Review, pages 63 to 71. In this known method, an original information recording disc is reproduced with a suitable record player and supplied through an interface to a logic analyzer via a synchronization circuit. The logic analyzer evaluates the reproduced information and compares it to a reference signal. If the information does not match the reference signal, the logic analyzer draws attention to this and informs the recorder. If the information does match the reference signal, the recorder is ready to record the information on a data blank disc. The reproduction cycle is repeated continuously. The prior-art method has the disadvantage that the logic analyzer has a relatively high power consumption and this means that it is unsuitable for use in portable equipment. The method is also not suitable for recording television programs, especially because the logic analyzer requires a great deal of space. Cavities in occlusal surfaces of primary molars: three-dimensional morphometric analysis. To classify the morphology of occlusal caries in occlusal surfaces of primary molars and analyze the differences in morphometric parameters of carious lesions in occlusal surfaces of primary molars. The sample was a cross-sectional study of 328 occlusal surfaces of primary molars from 333 patients, with ages ranging from 3 to 9 years, without caries, restored occlusal surfaces or developmental alterations. These patients were treated in 2 Brazilian public health care units. The occlusal surfaces of primary molars were examined at low magnification and classified as sound, superficial and deep caries. The occlusal surfaces were sampled for the classification of carious lesion in occlusal surfaces using 3D morphometric analysis. Multiple-comparison tests were applied to the morphometric analysis. The occlusal surfaces were classified in 180 (64.6%) sound, 15 (4.2%) superficial and 87 (27.3%) deep caries. The most common type of deep lesion was grade 3 (38.1%), followed by grade 2 (29.3%), grade 1 (25.9%) and grade 0 (5.7%). Superficial caries had more extent than sound and deep caries ($p = 0.05$). Lesions of
