Equilibrium constants of deprotonated anions of para-substituted benzoic acids determined by potentiometric titration. Mixtures of para-substituted benzoic acid and an equimolar amount of hydrogen tetrabutylammonium hydroxide, measured in aqueous solution at 25.0 ± 0.1 degrees C, provided the values of aqueous $pK(a)$ (-). Values of $\log K(0)$ at 25.0 ± 0.1 degrees C were determined from the relevant thermodynamic data of anionic solutions of para-substituted benzoic acids. The dependence of the $pK(a)$ (-) on the para-substituent was examined. The $pK(a)$ (-) was found to be linearly correlated with the Hammett substituent constant σ . Hence, the $pK(a)$ (-) value was predicted by the Parke-Parrish-Pointer (P-P-P) relationship. From the value of $pK(a)$ (-) from the P-P-P equation, the $\log K(0)$ value was evaluated at the experimental temperature. The predicted $\log K(0)$ values in the -0.5 to -2.5 range are in good agreement with the experimental values, and for the para-substituent a better agreement was found. The deviation from the P-P-P equation for the meta-substituent should be attributed to steric hindrance. Could you expand on that? Was the siren placed somewhere behind the tree? Can you show me that? They probably thought it was prudent to keep it as close to the house as possible. So they placed it in the tree to get the most of the house away from the street when it came time to evacuate. We had a good number of trees in our neighborhood like this in New Orleans so we were fine. _____
