and has been updated with the release of further information The suicide of an Ontario man whose body was found on the shore of Lake Ontario on Friday and the plea this week from a long-time friend and comrade to stay away from the region of the Great Lakes until someone knows what happened is among the mysteries to arise from the death of Trevor Douglas Murgatroyd, the professional smuggler who mysteriously disappeared in June 2014. Mr. Murgatroyd, who was a graduate of King's College and the University of Guelph, had been in the news in recent weeks for his role in the Great Lakes St. Lawrence Seaway project, where he was working as a customs inspector in Ontario, as well as for his freelance work - including as a hockey writer and fisherman - that helped make him well-known in the Toronto area. Story continues below advertisement "Doug was a well-loved man and a very close friend to many of us. We'll miss his warm smile, dry sense of humour, and generosity of spirit," said Paul McKinnon, a Canadian sports legend and former NHL player who had been helping to write Mr. Murgatroyd's book. "I know we'll all miss seeing that smile on our faces, hearing that laugh on the phone." Mr.

Murgatroyd was described by friends as a man who had been through so much. In 2014, he revealed to The Globe and Mail in a series of interviews that he had been sexually abused as a child and had been diagnosed with Asperger's syndrome. He was open about the fact that the diagnosis had been made by a psychologist who had been chosen by his mother, Patricia. On Friday, the 27-year-old's body was found floating on the north end of the lake, near Kingston, Ont., by another boatman, who called police around 5:15 p.m. The cause of death was not immediately clear, but the Ontario Provincial Police said the man had only washed up on the shoreline of the lake earlier in the day.
