Fri Jun 03, 2010 8:17 am Its been a long time since I've posted in this forum... I've come across the question as to whether or not it's better to study for a conversion by getting your scriptures on a CD or whether or not it's better to make a conversion and teach your family the word? The decision for me at this point in my life is to study for the gospel myself rather than teach my family members. I can't begin to tell you what a difference I can make in my family and if I'm going to be able to have my family return to the church it will be because I personally am baptized and have had the word in my heart and the testimony in my mind. If you have family members that want to be baptized they should be baptized... There's plenty of people who have been baptized a lot before and should be able to teach their family members. But teaching a family member is a very different thing than studying for and having a testimony of the Book of Mormon. Let me give you some things to think about... Is the family members that aren't ready to baptize themselves going to be as sensitive to your experience? Will they be able to see the difference? Will they be able to love you enough to let you come and fill their lives with knowledge? Will they give you the spiritual goods to let you know they know the gospel? Is the family member who may need to be taught out of it going to have time to let you be there and help them learn the word? You don't know your answers to any of those questions... the only answer
