Masks and Filters The first thing you want to do with an image is sharpen or soften it. Photoshop, like most other editors has two controls to do this: the Amount slider and the Detail slider. If you use the Amount slider to sharpen the image, the problem with this is that it increases the overall size of the image. To solve this, you need to use a filter, which is a tool that works just as well as a brush. There are many ways to add a filter to an image, but you will mainly see two types: Photoshop filters and X plugins. Photoshop filters are filters that come with Photoshop and add a subtle artistic effect. They are good for editing images and making them look more professional, but if you want to use one, you can either use the filter that comes with Photoshop, or the Add Filter dialogue, which is found in the Filters menu. You can also use filters that come with the other programs you use to edit your images, such as Elements, GIMP and Darktable. These are known as X plugins. There are many available on the internet and some of them are free. If you would prefer to create your own filters, there are many tutorials that explain how to do this. You can also buy filters from websites that sell Photoshop plugins. You may have some of the filters available to you as built in tools, for example if you have Photoshop Lightroom, you can use the Adjust brush tool to add a filter, by clicking and then pressing Shift with your mouse. If you have a plugin, you can click on the brush to see the available effects, and this is usually a filter that comes with an image editing application. I will cover this in more detail later. Taking an Original Photo to Photoshop If you are new to Photoshop, it can be daunting to start editing images, so it is useful to have an original image you can start with. The easiest way to get an image is to use Photoshop's built-in camera or your scanner. You can also open images with another application and have them saved in.psd format. If you use the Scanner button in Photoshop, you can use the Magic Wand to remove unwanted areas. When using the Magic Wand tool, you will need to adjust the settings in the dialog box. The best method is to set a threshold, such as 80% grey

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a structural body for a rollover protection structure, comprising at least a front region of the structural body of the rollover protection structure (hereinafter also briefly called "NPP", NPP=rollover protection structure) being supported on the roof of a vehicle and at least a rear region of the structural body of the NPP, adjoining the roof-sided structural body, being supported on the vehicle body. The invention further relates to a roof element for the roof of a vehicle, which roof element is suitable in particular for being placed in the structural body of the NPP. 2. Description of the Related Art In modern vehicles, in order to minimize the risk of injuries to passengers or pedestrians when a vehicle crashes, the passenger compartment is typically separated from the remainder of the vehicle by a rollover protection structure, generally also referred to as "NPP" (NPP=rollover protection structure). The rollover protection structure is designed in particular to prevent deformation of the vehicle passenger compartment in the event of a vehicle rolling over. For this purpose, the NPP is usually fixed to the roof of the vehicle and has a height that is adapted to the height of the vehicle passenger compartment. For example, the NPP may be so configured as to extend from the roof to the bottom edge of the vehicle passenger compartment. EP 1 554 349 B1 describes a rollover protection structure, having a roof-sided structural body supporting a front region of the NPP and a vehicle-body-sided structural body supporting a rear region of the NPP. The roof-sided structural body and the vehicle-body-sided structural body are joined together by a frame, which is fixed to a part of the vehicle body and which, in particular, forms the interface between the structural body and the frame. For its part, the roof-sided structural body comprises a roof-sided frame, which is fixed to the vehicle body and is preferably designed as a rigid foam material or as a light metal extrusion. The roof-sided frame usually comprises front, roof, and rear cross bars of which the front cross bar and the roof cross bar are rigidly connected together by rigid fixing means. The roof-sided frame is generally supported on the roof of the vehicle by means of a roof hanger fixed to the roof of the vehicle. The roof hanger is generally fixed directly to the roof-sided frame.
