There are some other sites that aren't shown above because the spyware is only installed locally on the host, and not on the major part of the website. Rootkit Because this malware doesn't do much, it's hard to verify if it's running. It is important to scan the machine for it immediately. The purpose of the rootkit is to hide itself from standard anti-malware software. Some variants can have connections to both the browser and the infected computer's network connections.Q: How to set content type filter order in Views? I have a page that has a different context for its search form: to filter all results at once, or select specific content types. If I go to the node's edit page, I can check "Content type" and the search form appropriately filters by content type. However, I can't seem to do this in Views. From a node page, when you go to "Search" it asks you if you want to search by "Node type" or "Content type", but it doesn't let you choose to filter by content type. If you check the "Content type" checkbox, it will usually display all content types in a single result set (unless you're looking at the taxonomy field "Content type", in which case it will group content types by the vocabulary). I've tried adding a views content type filter and set it to be before and after the field. That just resulted in the field asking if I wanted to filter by "Content type" first, and not sorting the results by content type after. Is there any way to change the order of the content type filter? A: I'm not sure if this is an answer to the question as asked, but I think it's also an answer to a different question: what's the best way to handle the "Content type" field under multiple content types in Views?

I have a PreferenceActivity with a ListView inside of it. I want to delete an item from the ListView. Normally, I would implement the following code, but it doesn't work since the PreferenceActivity is not aware of the item that is being deleted: public void onClick(View v) { // TODO Auto-generated method stub int viewposition = listView.getPositionForView(v); boolean result = myPref.delete(viewposition); if(result == true) { Log.i("PrefStatus", "pref deleted"); } } How can I delete the item from the PreferenceActivity (i.e., something like PreferenceActivity.this.remove(viewposition))?
