No, we're not talking about fashion labels, though it would be nice to think that Mango, Versace, or a number of other well known fashion labels would begin to align themselves more closely with Cuban fashion, since fashion is what gives free Cuba a little shwag when we're all going ga-ga over their revolution. No, we're talking about a 16 year old artist named Jesus Guerra who was killed while making art on the other side of Cuba's mysterious known only as the South Beach Area in what is known as the marina of Havana. Mr. Guerra was working on his latest piece when a whirlpool phenomenon occurred (popularized by the song "Wherever You Go, There You Are" if you are a heavy listener of the Black Eyed Peas) and trapped him under the pile of rubble that resulted. Guerra was a top student at a city school of art and has already started to exhibit around the city and state. The young artist was simply doing what he loved and as a result, died doing it. The young artist is our Art Crush, Jesus Guerra. Always so good of you to share these stories. I'm moved to tears reading this...for example, as a mother, I can imagine the fear and pain at seeing their child's lifeless body, and then the anxiety that went on to the next generation, with parents making sure their children know that they love them...this is such a heart-wrenching story. This is my absolute favorite. I know most of you probably watched the movie "Catwoman" and loved it. I loved this movie as well and the main lead was Bane. It had a very interesting soundtrack and it is a Must Watch for any movie lover. I personally do not like the music in this so thats why I am asking. The problem here is that the main lead and my personal favorite is Ramon, but Bane and Catwoman has the BEST music that just gives me a smile. hello everyone!! i am sorry for posting here again - i have been away a while with family 1cdb36666d
