This is a great opportunity for you to reveal your talent to the world and use your skill to change people's lives. In my experience of being an autodidact, the learning curve to reach the level of expertise to teach only took me about 4-5 years. This was due to my dedication to learning and practicing every day. As I recall, I began with learning basic morphology, were anatomy as a foundation. After that, I expanded to learning both general biology and life sciences. However, during that time, I was also sharpening my own teaching skills. In addition, I also worked hard in setting a path that would lead to my goal. I slowly developed my own system. This is also a great opportunity to answer this question for your peers. If you are able to answer it well enough, you might even gain a lot of traffic from it. It's very rare to find questions asked here that have no factual answer already given. This one is different.
