PDFs, or Portable Document Format files, are a popular format for e-books and have been around for quite some time. However, they were also the first format for print jobs that were so simple, most graphic designers overlooked them. Because they're so simple, they are used on the Internet today. This was the main reason why I created this book,

US govt data: Intense launch pad for startups In a bid to encourage fintech industry development in India, the Ministry of Finance has released a feedback report regarding the status of ecosystem for fintech startups in India. The report, which is an outcome of a continuous dialogue between the Ministry and various stakeholders such as government service providers, fintech industry players, entrepreneurs, investors, academia, etc., delves into the regulatory environment and market dynamics of fintech in India. “Fintech startups in India face a number of regulatory challenges, in particular the constant debate about classification of these startups, as well as the common associated challenges, such as hassle in obtaining clearances, or access to resources, or regulatory challenges due to the lack of understanding of regulatory requirements,” the report states. The report shows that the lack of clarity and regulation or even a lack of regulation, or a confusing regulatory environment is contributing to a growth in unauthorised or disreputable financial products. According to the Ministry, the data shows that the level of growth has been over-estimated as a number of fintech firms are not properly credit-rating their customers, thus making it difficult to take on large risk. In addition, the report suggests that there is a lack of accounting and oversight processes for non-banking financial companies. “This suggests that there is less data on the types of services available and who are the main users of these services,” the report says. The report also states that the Indian fintech ecosystem is mainly driven by mobile payment channels and low-value data services, and there is no indication that fintech startups in India are present in other segments, such as wealth management. In addition to this, there is a high percentage of service providers of fintech in India, but a low-percentage of innovation. While “services play an important role in the fintech industry, innovation and entrepreneurship need to be fostered to the next level by leveraging resources which are generated by services,” the report further states. “Services are done by businesses and we have to look at how these businesses can be supported, how they are taxed, how we can build an ecosystem which is climate friendly, etc,” Pranesh Prakash, Founder and CEO, Shift Payments said. He further added, “If we can do
