Windows 7 SP1 x64.Evaluating the quality of life of patients on hemodialysis in an outpatient hemodialysis center. The goal of this study was to determine whether patients on hemodialysis with chronic renal failure develop the same degree of disability and dysfunction as the dialysis population as a whole. Using questionnaires and MMPI profiles, it was determined that a sample of patients on hemodialysis has higher disability and lower efficacy than the general dialysis population. Three factors correlating with disability were identified: chronicity, marital problems, and a history of suicide attempts. Psychotherapy in both individual and group settings is recommended for patients on hemodialysis..
